Let the Dead Rest

Our Prosperity Myth

GERMANY, undoubtedly, will be first in transoceanic commercial flying. Count Zeppelin, dirigible, twice as big as the Los Angeles, is expected to start carrying passengers from Berlin to Lakehurst, N. J., next Sunday. She will be driven with "blue gas," a new fuel, and by German enterprise. United States officials have been forbidden to give any information of any kind about government aircraft, plans or building.

Germany intends to lead the world in aircraft, and probably will do it, although the allies forbid her to build fighting planes. Even that restriction will be forgotten if Moscow or Asia ever comes flying against western Europe.

That news, of itself, is encouraging. It may mean that our government means to take an active, constructive interest in aviation, instead of leaving that to private individuals, as hitherto. California, by the way, leads America in aviation. California's licensed aircraft about equals those of New York and Illinois combined.

A play to be produced in England resuscitates Britain's unknown dead soldier, rising in uniform, to make a few remarks.

Organizations of ex-service men protest, justly.

It is time to let the unknown dead soldier, rest in peace, where ever he may lie. He should not be brought to life in plays or books. And he should not be used as an advertisement by visitors, borrowers of national funds, etc.

So-called emigres, kicked out of Russia when the Romanoffs disappeared, protest against Americans engaging in Russian trade. When we send business and money to Russia, building property there, we diminish the probability of Czars returning.

That should be an inducement to pay Russia as much as possible. But there is another inducement, powerful in this businesslike country.

The American-Russian chamber of commerce shows that American exploiting government concessions in Russia, made in each year 146 per cent on capital sent to Russia in the year, and 813 per cent on total capital invested.

That makes one nine per cent on all money went small. Money will go where 146 per cent is to be had if it has to go through fire and even a long business talk to finance communism.

High finance knows that when communism grows rich it is communism no longer.

Trotzky in writing his memoirs, which might be condensed into "Read what happened to Danton and Robespierre and what usually happens to those that get in on the ground floor in revolutions."

The world, or part of it, will learn with surprise that Trotzky is a rich man, and learn without surprise, that the Soviet government "sequestrated" his money. Robespierre and Danton had no money.

Democrats say our prosperity is "a myth." Wall Street does not agree with the Democrats. September, 1928, now part of past history, broke all stock-selling records, with 90,906,718 shares in spite of an interest rate that averaged 7.394 per cent for the month. A business that can stand such usury must be prosperous.

Dividends of $277,966,333 declared last month, are $35,000,000 ahead of September a year ago. If this country is not prosperous, what is prosperity?

Eight thousand bankers, gathering in Philadelphia to discuss credit, etc., might also discuss usury, and violation of state laws on usury. The wisdom of killing a goose that lays golden eggs might also be mentioned.

Observatore Romano of Rome, semi-official organ of the Vatican, declares that the Catholic Church in America remains absolutely impartial in this political campaign, and denounces dragging religion into politics, saying: "Fanatics of all Protestant denominations have painted this scarecrow (the danger in Governor Smith's election) in strong colors, completely disregarding Smith's declaration concerning the absolute loyalty of all Catholics to their country."

Leon Vanderstuyft, Belgian, has ridden a bicycle 77 miles in one hour, paced by an automobile.

No European railroad train ever attained that speed, yet the achievement, that once would have meant much, now means nothing. Any little car or motorcycle can be made to do the same work, and keep up the speed, day and night, with no killing strain on any human heart.

REJECT MILL PEACE IN NEW BEDFORD BY 4 UNIONS TO 3 VOTE

New Bedford, Oct. 1—Hopes of a settlement of the textile strike, which has thrown 26,000 men and women out of employment since April, were dashed today when a majority vote of seven local unions rejected a compromise offer of a 5 per cent wage cut. The vote was 4-3.

The compromise was urged by the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration and the citizens' mediation committee and had been accepted by the New Bedford Manufacturers' Association.

Balloting by individual unions showed the spinners, slasher tenders and mule minders were in favor of the compromise while the voters of the loom fixers, weavers, warper tenders and carders opposed it.

The strike now in its 25th week, originated in the announcement of a 10 per cent cut in wages of all classes.

PROBE DRUNKENNESS IN DEER ISLAND PLOT QUIZ

Frequent escapes rules of prisoners drunk and drugged—and finally the blocking of what is believed to have been an attempt at a wholesale jail delivery, led today to opening of a sweeping probe of conditions at Deer Island.

The investigation was begun by Penal Institutions Commissioner Philip Chapman, and, as his first act, he summoned into conference George F. A. Hoisley, master at the House of Correction on the harbor island.

Master Mulcahy visited City Hall after obtaining "escape warrants" against Carl A. Gills of Somerville and Arthur McCrean and James McCluskey of Roxbury.

This trio will be arraigned in East Boston tomorrow charged with attempting to escape and with damaging city property.

PROBE SAW SUPPLY

They are alleged to have been the men who sawed bars of cells in the "solitor" division of the House of Correction, and who hid short lengths of iron bars intending, it is believed, to use them as weapons against jail guards.

The origin of the saws found in the men's possession is one point in the investigation. At the same time will be probed the source of supply of drugs and liquor obtained by the prisoners.

CROWD ALMOST MOBS SMITH IN ROCHESTER

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 1—Thousands of his fellow New Yorkers gave Governor Al Smith a frenzied welcome today upon his return from his western tour.

The Governor was almost mobbed by crowds of admirers when he stepped from his special train at 9:45 and entered an auto.

"Atta boy, Al," and "You told 'em, didn't you?" were shouted at him. The crush was so great that Mrs. Emily Warner, the Governor's daughter, was separated from the party and had to be rescued by her husband Maj. John A. Warner, chief of the New York State constabulary.

For five blocks along Clinton st., to the Seneca Hotel, the governor's car slowly crawled, hemmed in on all sides by marchers. The governor

DEFENSE GRILLS TWO WHO TESTIFY AGAINST HOPPE IN DEATH TRIAL

Once more today Stephen Hoppe was placed at the scene of the murder of Patrolman Alfred N. Hollis in Quincy when the defendant in Superior Court at Dedham, John K. Sullivan, 18, of Springfield, corroborated testimony previously given by his cousin, Joseph Lund, of Quincy.

Both Westberg and Lund, today underwent rigorous cross-examination by counsel for the defense, headed by Attorney James T. Cassidy.

Westberg, by his own admission, became "all mixed up" at one time during his previous testimony.

Lund gave the spectators who filled the courtroom a surprise when he stated that he had come from Springfield to Quincy with Sullivan and Hoppe on the night of the murder, and not on the following night, as he had previously testified.

LABOR CHIEFS PLEDGE SUPPORT TO HOOVER

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Oct. 1 — Herbert Hoover has gathered an amazing harvest of support from labor leaders as a result of his recent "bread and butter speech" in Newark, N. J., it was announced at Republican headquarters today.

A flood of congratulatory messages pledging support began to flow in the day following his address and the tide has continued unabated ever since.

Hoover's advisers declare the response to the speech has exceeded in volume anything they have witnessed in half dozen presidential campaigns.

Among labor leaders, whose declarations for Hoover reached his headquarters within the last 48 hours are Alexander F. Whitney, president of the Railroad Trainmen; William L. Hutcheson, general president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; D. W. Holt, international president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen, and

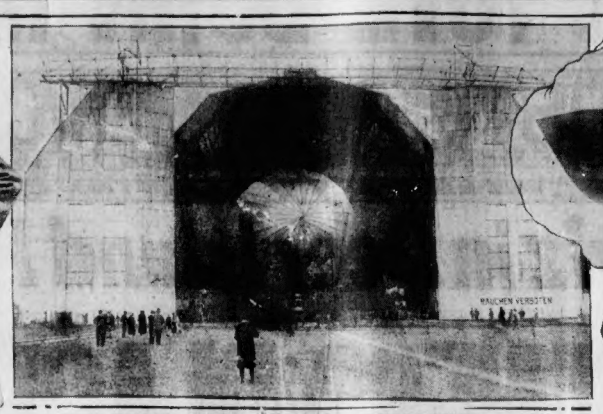
Elimination of Heavy Gasoline ∽ Loads in Zeppelin by Use of Gas ∽ Fuel Marks New Era in Flying

Lady Drummond Hay C. E. Rosendahl



NEW MOTIVE POWER FOR ZEP'S FIVE ENGINES

One of the outstanding features of the proposed trip from Germany to this country October 7—the use of blue gas fuel—will be watched closely by aviation experts. Constant landings caused by inability to carry sufficient gasoline, will be overcome with this new motive power. The huge craft is seen here nosing its way from its hangar prior to a trial flight over Germany. Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of Germany's new air queen, is elated over the success attained with gas fuel, and points to the opening of a new field of airship development as a result. Lady Drummond Hay, the only woman passenger that the giant Graf Zeppelin will carry to this country, is shown wearing specially designed Zeppelin hat. One of her flight companions, Lieut.-Comdr. Charles E. Rosendahl, U. S. N., commander of the dirigible, Los Angeles, will make a careful study of the new fuel idea on the craft. He is now in Germany awaiting the start of the Zeppelin's flight.

The giant Zeppelin is shown soaring through the clouds, operated with gas fuel.

COLLEGE STUNT KILLS BOY

McElroy died a few minutes after being shocked by light wires, connected by a rheostat to two sets of bed springs through which he crawled as part of the traditional fraternity ritual for neophytes.

Two physicians who examined the body declined to say whether fright or the electricity itself caused death. Strength of the electrical charge which entered his body was not determined.

Dist. Atty. Moore, who instituted an immediate investigation by questioning upper classmen who participated in the initiation, early today, had not announced an inquest. No arrests had been made.

The fraternity issued a statement saying the youth fainted during the stunt through which, it was asserted, five other students had preceded him, and to which 194 other students had been subjected during the local chapter's history.

McElroy was said to have been fed a raw oyster, saturated with castor oil, as another part of the mock initiation preceding the bed springs stunt.

Blue Gas Fuel on Zep New Era in Flying

By CARL VON WEIGAND

Universal Service Special

Friedrichshafen, Oct. 1—What promises to mark epochal progress in the development of airships is the use for the first time in the history of aerial navigation of gas fuel as motive power to drive the five big engines of Germany's new air liner, the Count Zeppelin.

"The demonstration of the use of gas fuel instead of gasoline or a mixture of gasoline and benzol as hitherto used by the Zeppelins was an extraordinary success in every respect—the success that we were confident we would have," declared Dr. Hugo Eckener to me as he stepped from the "bridge" or control cabin of the Count Zeppelin as the ship landed after nine and a half hours' run on its fourth trial flight.

USE GASOLINE ALSO

"We ran about five hours on gas and then changed from the gas to a mixture of gasoline and benzol and back again repeatedly on every motor without the slightest difficulty or trouble in any motor.

"Our passengers did not even know that we had been running on gas until I told them. The importance and significance of this to future air travel by airships will be obvious to every technical man. It means that, instead of carrying many tons of gasoline, airships will carry gas fuel that is the same weight as air as we shall do on our voyage to America. Thus will the radius of operation without refueling be greatly increased, enabling the carrying of a large paying load."

Captains Lehmann, Flemming, Wittemann and Schiller, and Chief Engineers Diegle and Bourle were even more enthusiastic. Commander Rosendahl, of the American navy department, said:—

The gas fuel was an outstanding success on this trip, and proved a remarkable substitute for liquid fuel. So far as I was able to observe, and I was all over the ship, there was no smell of gas and no leakage. If this German experiment continues as successful as today it will mean much in the development of airships of the future."

STANDS BAD WEATHER

The Count Zeppelin has proved itself to be no mere "fair weather" ship, as there was "dirty" weather with a dowpour of rain for more than two hours with a gusty, high wind.

There was a drizzling rain with a very low "ceiling" to the clouds and little visibility when the Count Zeppelin, at the commodore's command of "hock," took off and in three minutes vanished in the clouds with 17 persons aboard, including the crew.

Among the guests were President Loebe of the Reichstag; Oscar von Miller, head of the famous Deutsche museum; Majors Scott and Booth, airship experts of the British air ministry; and Mrs. Booth, who was the second English woman to participate in the flights of the airliner.

There was some surprise that Dr. Eckener took the ship in the face of the prospect of nasty weather.

"The Count Zeppelin is not merely a ship for windless and sunshiny days," said Dr. Eckener.

On its trip the ship passed over Munich and Salzburg where the fog and low clouds hung so heavy over the mountains that there was no visibility. The ship then turned back to Regensburg and went from there to Augsburg. For two hours the ship proceeded through the heavy rain and driving clouds and climbed to a height of 4500 feet only to find a high wind blowing.

The ship was so steady the passengers hardly noticed the effect of the wind. In the combined lounge and dining room, Dr. Eckener, Miller and Leobe each made a short speech which was broadcast from the ship.

On Tuesday it is planned by Dr Eckener to start the Count Zeppelin on a long duration flight of from 30 to 40 hours, probably going to Scandinavia, visiting Berlin and thence proceeding by way of East Prussia. If everything goes all right on that trip it will be the last trial flight.

Upon its return, it is the intention to clear the ship for America.

From various sections of Germany gifts are being sent for the transatlantic crew, including hams, bologna, sausages and wines. A box of 40 harmonicas—one for each member of the crew, has been received.

A car needs a home. Many pre a garage for rent! Tell about it and give location in the Want Root Ads. That's the way to fill it.

MASKED THUGS FOILED IN R. I.

Providence, Oct. 1—Three masked and armed thugs, whose nerve failed to measure up to their ambitions, held up 22 customers in the Phenix coffee shop, Cushing st.—and then became panicky and fled with no loot.

A futile attempt to open the cash register was made by one of the holdup men, but he was unable to operate a series of safety buttons in the correct sequence.

The holdup trio, with a fourth man driving, fled in the automobile that brought them to the shop.

When the three, waving white handkerchiefs over their faces, entered the shop the customers at tables believed them to be entertainers.

But one remained at the door, while a second swept his revolver in a commanding circle and the third approached the cashier. Mrs. [illegible] machine and it raced away.

Dear Madam:

I am pleased to know that you have been named Vice Chairman for your precinct. I feel sure you are anxious to do everything in your power to elect the splendid ticket "Hoover and Curtis" which our party is so fortunate as to have in the field.

Mr. Hoover himself and the National Committee are depending on the women to save our country in this hour of very vital moral and religious crisis. We must save the United States from being Romanized and run riddon, and the call is to the women to do so.

Will you not please try to get a list of every Republican woman and every Hoover Democratic woman who votes at your precinct? The men will help you, and if necessary I think you would be willing to make a house to house canvass, distributing literature, and finding out how the women feel in this election - would you not?

We are sending you some cards, and will send more literature, if you wish it.

Will appreciate a reply, giving us an idea as to how your precinct stands - also a list of Hoover women at your precinct to whom we might send literature.

Cordially yours,

TWO PROBES IN POISON PLOT

vestigation are seeking to learn the following:

First, how it is possible for prisoners on the island to get complete hack saws and a supply of blades.

Second, how it is possible for prisoners to get liquor in such quantities that they become drunk and disorderly and have to be placed in solitary confinement.

Third, how is it possible for a prisoner to get from his cell to the middle of the night and break into Mulcahy home.

More than one hack-saw used in sawing the six bars in the cell doors of the cells in the "solitary" section of the prison. One of the saws was found, concealed in a door frame. Search is being made for the other blades.

Gillis, McCrossin and McCluskey, the three who engineered the jail delivery plot, had sections of their cell bars as weapons, were all sent into solitary confinement for being drunk and disorderly. So were two other prisoners in the "solitary" section, Thomas Manning and Owen Quilty, who were found drinking from a jug of alcohol.

It became known that James Foley, another prisoner, recently broke into Master Mulcahy's home in the middle of the night and was ransacking the place when Mulcahy awakened. At revolver's point he captured the man and had him locked up again. No mention of this is found in prison records, Mulcahy explaining that he intended getting a warrant out for the man, charging breaking and entering.

Only a few days ago a prisoner escaped from the island by swimming Shirley Gut, using two empty milk cans as buoys.

Letters commending them for their alertness in blocking the jail delivery were sent today by Commissioner Chapman to Patrick J. Doherty, a watchman at the House of Correction, and Stephen J. Walters, a guard.

BONNIE GLASS IS GIVEN DIVORCE

Announcement that she had obtained a Mexican divorce from James Ben Ali Haggin, artist, was made today in New York by Arturo Del Toro, Mexican attorney.

He said the woman who left her home beneath the Elevated structure near Eglseton sq. a dozen years ago to marry wealth and attain fame, charged the artist with mental cruelty.

Her suit countered a divorce action on the same grounds, brought by Ben Ali Haggin early last spring.

It is only a bit more than 12 years since Bonnie Glass, then Helen Roche, daughter of a mail carrier living in Dimock st., Roxbury, came first into fame by eloping to Nashua, N. H., with Graham Glass, Jr., Harvard student and son of a wealthy Oregon publisher.

Papa Glass waxed exceeding wroth over his son's plunge into matrimony and cut his allowance from $800 a month to $8 a week.

The romance ended three years later with a divorce. She married Ben Ali Haggin in 1916.

FIANCEE DUE TO REACH NAPLES TOMORROW

Naples Oct. 1 (INS)—Wedding rumors centering about Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, were reinforced by another this afternoon when it was reported that he might be married on board the Italian liner Saturnia to Miss Josephine ("Polly") Lauder. Miss Lauder, her mother and a party of friends are due to arrive here tomorrow on the Italian ship.

According to the latest rumor, the ceremony might be performed on the ship, with special precautions to keep reporters away. It is the ardent wish of the former pugilist that newspaper men be absent from his nuptials.

Rome, Oct. 1 (INS)—Miss Josephine "Polly" Lauder, fiancee of Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, sent a radiogram to her affiancee today suggesting that their marriage take place elsewhere than first planned, it was learned. The message, which was sent from the liner Saturnia, was evidently inspired by the publicity the nuptials have attracted.

It is understood here that Tunney is cancelling all plans and will join the Lauder party upon the Saturnia when it docks at Naples.

The original plan was for the marriage to take place at Sorrento. Later it was reported that the ceremony might be held here in Rome. Still late Italian newspapers published a report that it might be conducted at Naples.

There were to be two services, one civil and the other religious, on October 5th or 6th.

New York, Oct. 1 (INS)—"Gene's a lucky man; he's getting a wonderful girl."

"I have never met Miss Lauder, but Gene deserves the finest, and I'm sure he made a wise choice."

Arriving aboard the liner Minnewaska today, intimate friends of Gene Tunney and his fiancee, Polly Lauder, added their voices to the chorus of cheers over the forthcoming wedding in Italy.

The returning travelers, who had not met until the vessel docked here, were Miss Margaret L. St. John, girlhood chum of Miss Lauder, and Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale University, whose friendship with Tunney sprang from their common interest in letters.

Miss St. John, whose home in Greenwich, Ct., is but a half-mile from the Lauder estate, was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. G. C. St. John and her younger sister, Louise.

LEAVES BOSTON ON FIRST LEG TO ANTARCTIC

Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd, U. S. N., retired, said "au revoir" to Boston today as he started on the first leg of his epoch-making trip of exploration in the Antarctic.

With a smile illuminating his harassed features, Commander Byrd refused to give a farewell message to his fellow-citizens of this city, declaring he preferred to say "au revoir" instead of "adieu."

"I'll see you again in 1930," he promised as with a wave of his hat he pulled out on the "out trail" of Kipling's poem, the adventurers' path leading to glory or the grave, "the trail that is ever new."

With Mrs. Byrd, who is to accompany him as far as San Pedro, Cal., the explorer left for New York by train, bound for the Pacific coast, where he will board one of his ships next Saturday for New Zealand.

"Since I have lived in Boston," he said, "the citizens have made me feel very much at home and the press has been most considerate.

"But as for a farewell message—well, I don't exactly like that word 'farewell.' I'd much rather say au revoir instead of adieu."

Comdr. Byrd spent the last few hours before train time with his children, the center of a hive of activity at the Byrd home on Brimmer st. Trunks and bags were being packed for the long journey, under the critical eye of Mrs. Byrd.

The latter made a last minute shopping trip, returning with her arms filled with bundles, the contents of which are not to be revealed until the final leave-taking.

It was a depressing time for the youngsters, particularly Richard, Jr., who idolizes his father and who followed Byrd's flights to the Arctic and to France on charts.

"Dickie" wanted to accompany his dad on the present trip, but when the impossibility of this was explained to him, resigned himself to again following his father's course on the map.

NEEDS DIVORCE WITNESS

APPLIES FOR MIDDLESEX DECREE

Mrs Pearl Pauline Posner of Holliston, who sought a divorce in Middlesex Probate Court from David Posner. She claimed desertion, but was told she must have a witness.

1-DAY BRIDE, 29 OTHERS CROWD DIVORCE COURT

Thirty uncontested divorce actions were heard by Judges Leggat and Arthur E. Beane in Middlesex probate court today.

Pearl Pauline Posner of Holliston appeared before Judge Beane and sought a divorce from David Posner, who, she claimed, deserted her at Yonkers, N. Y., the day they were married, April 10, 1928. She was told she must have at least one corroborating witness.

Josephine Kowera of Valentine st., Cambridge, was granted a divorce from Peter Kowera for intoxication and cruel and abusive treatment. He once cut her on the arm, she said.

William J. Gray of Winchester was granted a divorce from Annie M. Gray, whom he married in 1895. He told the court that without any apparent reason his wife walked out of their home early one morning, and he had neither seen nor heard from her since. There are four children, all over 21.

Bertha Mabel Spencer of Cambridge was married to Richard J. Spencer June 10, 1920. She said that when he objected to the meals, which was frequently, he slapped her face. She testified that the treatment her husband accorded her was so rough she could stand it no longer, and was given a divorce.

SAVED BY HUMAN CHAIN

OLD FRIENDS TO CARE FOR ONCE-RICH TRAMP

Robert H. Moores of Newton, N. H., former wealthy showman, who was sentenced to six months in Dedham Jail as a vagrant, was released from that institution today and rode back to his home to be welcomed tonight by sympathetic townsfolk.

Newspaper reports of the predicament into which the once wealthy college graduate fell when he was picked up penniless by the Quincy police stirred the hearts of his New Hampshire friends, and they commissioned Sheriff Henry Creeney of Newton to seek the release of Moores under promise of rehabilitating him on his return to home.

Creeney called at the Dedham jail today with a new suit of clothes for his unfortunate townsman, and in his appeal for his release related the story, told in Quincy court, of the uphill career and financial downfall of Moores.

Impressed by the description of the sacrifices Moores has had to make to support and provide medical attention for his bed-ridden wife, a former circus bareback rider, and of his breakdown at the death of his son, Probation Officer Alcott Fahey agreed to the recommendation of Sheriff Creeney.

Moores, an alumnus of Ging's College, Windsor, and the son of Adelaide Moores, former famous Canadian painter, formerly owned a palatial home in Medford and at one time possessed a fortune of considerable size.

HUGHES IN BAY STATE FIGHT

The proposed diversion by Massachusetts of the waters of the Ware and Swift rivers will be fought in behalf of Connecticut by Charles Evans Hughes, former Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, it was announced today.

Hughes has been appointed special assistant attorney-general by Atty Gen. Benjamin W. Alling of Connecticut, with the approval of Governor Trumbull.

While a justice of the Supreme Court, Hughes acted as special master in hearing the Chicago drainage canal case, regarded as similar to the Massachusetts case.

BRITAIN WON'T BAR AIMEE

London, Oct. 1 (AP)—Official announcement was made today that the home secretary will not prohibit Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, from landing in England "on the ground merely that she may advocate religious beliefs and doctrines of a controversial nature."

Like most every other alien, Mrs McPherson must satisfy the immigration officer at the port of arrival that she may properly be allowed to land, within the terms of the aliens' order of 1920.

Representations recently were made that Mrs. McPherson should be barred from entering Great Britain because of her sensational ways.

Britain in U. S. War Would Use Irish Ports—Valera

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Oct. 1 (AP)—Eamon de Valera, Irish Republican leader, said that if war broke out between Great Britain and the United States, Irish harbors would be used as bases for attacks on American commerce.

In an address delivered at a meeting in Carndonagh, County Donegal, De Valera asserted that the British were established in the principal Irish harbors. He explained that according to treaty the Irish would, in event of war, have to afford the British whatever facilities the British demanded.

CHAMBERLAIN IS SILENT ON NAVAL PACT

By OTHEMAN STEVENS

Los Angeles, Oct. 1.—"Not a word on politics. I determined when I left not to talk politics, and so far I have succeeded in keeping that resolution."

It was Sir Austen Chamberlain who, smilingly, but firmly, laid down that dictum on the deck of Capt. Robert Dollar's steamship President Adams, as she lay at anchorage off the Los Angeles harbor breakwater, just arrived from Nahou.

"How about the Anglo-Franco pact, Sir Austen?"

"Haven't a word to say," he answered and his eyes twinkled.

"We haven't heard anything about it," said Lady Chamberlain, at that the reporters hopefully turned to her.

"You haven't heard anything about it? Why, it has raised a lot of trouble. The United States Government has sent a rather firm note to Downing st. in recard to it."

"We haven't heard anything about it," repeated Lady Chamberlain, while Sir Austen warningly put his hand on her arm, "and that was that."

"Won't you say a word about world peace and unity of action to that end?" piped up another news man.

"I'll tell you," said Sir Austen, "I haven't had a holiday for a great many years, and I feel ill and determined to have a holiday. Now one can't have a holiday and talk politics. And then you've a lot of politics of your own just now. No, I shall keep to my resolution and enjoy the outing."

"But you represent the British empire as foreign secretary, and in a way you are the guest of the United States; don't you think a few words—"

"Why I didn't imagine I was anything other than a tourist here," he replied.

"No, really, I cannot talk about such things."

"I'd like to ask a favor of you all," said the visitor as the last photo was taken. "If you do write anything about me, will you kindly spell my name Austen with an 'o'?"

Naval Pact Banned by Ramsay McDonald

Birmingham, Eng., Oct. 1 (AP)—Ramsay MacDonald, former labor premier, intends to present to the annual labor party conference tomorrow a resolution calling for drastic reductions in all forms of armaments by international agreement.

Lack of progress toward disarmament will be stressed in Mr. MacDonald's statement. He will blame this on reservations made to the Kellogg-Briand pact renouncing war and to the pursuance of pre-war policies.

The labor leader will say that the Anglo-French naval accord should be abandoned; pointing out that it has had "a disastrous effect upon American public opinion." He will urge that a preparatory commission on disarmament meet "as soon as may be and before the end of 1928, unless until the draft of a treaty of disarmament is completed."

JAP PETITIONER SEIZED, TRYING TO SEE EMPEROR

Tokyo, Oct. 1 (AP)—While Emperor Hirohito was returning today from the Tokyo District Court, which he had visited in connection with inauguration of the jury system, a man wearing workmen's clothes attempted to present a petition. The man was arrested before he reached the Emperor and was held for examination. It was learned later that the workman desired to request the Emperor's good offices toward raising the standard of living of the proletariat.

ARMY FLIER AND GIRL FEARED LOST IN CANOE

San Francisco, Oct. 1 (AP)—Missing since Friday night, Lieut. Paul L. Woodruff, United States army pilot, and Miss Grinel Gette Heynemann, Belvedere society girl, are believed to have perished while on a moonlight canoeing trip in the bay. Aviator friends of the pilot scanned the bay from the air yesterday, but their search failed to reveal any wreckage of the canoe.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dearest Anne:

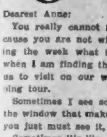
You really cannot imagine because you are not with me during the week what fun I have when I am finding the shops for us to visit on our weekly shopping tour.

Sometimes I see something in the window that makes me know you just must see it, too.

Sometimes it's like this:

"I Just Adore

your dress my dear," said a lovely lady to her companion the other day. They were walking just ahead of me in the Fabyan Bldg. at 26 West, Street. Her companion answered, "Yours is lovely, too, and I know where you bought it." I followed Lady Chamberlain, while Sir Austen warningly put his hand on her arm, "and that was that."



"Won't you say a word about world peace and unity of action to that end?" piped up another news man.

"I'll tell you," said Sir Austen, "I haven't had a holiday for a great many years, and I feel ill and determined to have a holiday. Now one can't have a holiday and talk politics. And then you've a lot of politics of your own just now. No, I shall keep to my resolution and enjoy the outing."

Into the Gillespie Gown Shop. The dresses are exquisite and most unusual. The lovely black velvet (sketched) is priced at $19.75. There are georgettes, crepes, silks and wools, tweeds and jerseys, as well as printed and plain velvets priced at $16.75 in all the new styles and colors. Sizes run from 14 to 46 with longer and fuller dresses in youth-like models for the older women. Let's visit this shop!

It Doesn't Matter

how bright and fair your hair may be or how alive it looks, there are hidden lights that you do not see and if you use

"Flonor," that magic lightener put up by Lesquendieu of Paris and sold exclusively by Meyer Jonasson & Co., in the Toilet Goods Dept. on the first floor you'll know that I speak truly for you'll be surprised at the lights that show that you've never noticed before. There is a very fine shampoo, also prepared by Lesquendieu, priced at 75c for a generous package especially recommended for use with "Flonor." These lovely products are good for dark or light hair.

Molly's Hands

are beautiful. She has long, slender fingers and the loveliest nails I have ever seen. They seem to keep a natural glow all their own and her finger tips are softly pink-tinged like the faintest blush rose. She uses Pearlite Liquid Nail Polish, priced at $1 for a bottle of polish and one of remover. It imparts to the nails the natural gleaming glow of the inside of lovely shells. Of course she buys hers in Hyannis at the Priscilla Pearl Shop where it is made, but we can get a supply at the Toilet Goods Department of S. S. Pierce Company, 89 Tremont St.

If Your Face

is feeling the ravages of your vacation and your skin needs toning up, there is nothing better for you than to go to the shop of L. Cunningham, at 161 Boylston st., for some facials. Her restful milk-pack facials are priced at only $3 and they will do wonders for your skin.

Permanent waves by Frederics Vita-Tonic Compound method Nestle or Eugene, are priced at the small price of 50c. a curl and are a real advantage to the thin-haired girl. Telephone Back Bay 9069 for appointment for any line of beauty culture given by expert operators.

Shadows at Dusktime are heavenly things, and we watch for them with great joy, but shadows of superfluous hair on the lip or under the chin are unbearable. Isn't it true? Therefore it behooves the lady who would be the last word in good looks to visit my friend, Miss Elisabeth Sparks, at 126 Tremont Street and have this blemish, no matter how thick the growth, removed once and for all. She is an expert in her work, and the work is painless and permanent. Her prices are reasonable and you'll enjoy visiting her shop, so much that you want to go again and again whether she is doing work for you or not. Appointments are private!

The Spanish Galleries of Chandler & Co., Tremont St., at West, is a place to delight your heart. I am particularly partial to the $10 dress section and I always walk straight to that department as soon as I get into Chandler's store. Perhaps that is because I can never seem to reconcile myself to the fact that they can possibly offer such good values for the small price of $10. It is because, however, that they buy in large quantities and so are able to give us the very same quality of materials and styles that goes usually into the higher priced dresses. This week there is an overwhelming tide of good looking clothes made of silk and velvet for afternoon tea dances. Jersey always finds a place high in the favor of milady for autumn and the new bordered tweeds in varied fall time colors are fine for sport or business wear. The sizes run from 14 to 46 and whether it is the young lo-ing mother or the debutants daughter who needs a new outfit she'll find it right in this same department. Let's go down there, Anne, and select a frock for your sister!

This Is the Day

of clubs of every description. Even "permanent wave clubs" are in vogue, so it isn't as surprising as it might be to hear of Scott's Unique Fur Club. If you join this club you may take advantage of easy payments. In any event, choose one of the three unique ways they offer of purchasing, by entering your coat now, making a small deposit and paying the balance when you want your coat, with no charge for alterations or storage. If you care to do so you may open a 30, 60 or 90-day charge account when your coat is taken out, or enjoy the convenience of small weekly or monthly payments while wearing your coat. The last mentioned plan is your starting as a member of the Unique Fur Club. Scott's dependable furs of Hudson Seal (Dyed Muskrat), Seal-Dyed Coney, Beaver, Squirrel, Caracul, Leopard, Raccoon, Pony, Broadtail, Muskrat, Opossum or Jap Mink are priced from $89 to $550. Scott's, New England's largest Fur Establishment, at 89 Summer St., Boston, and 61 Pratt St., Hartford, are giving unusual programs on the radio now for your approval. You'll find this shop a square, fine house to deal with, and you'll be everlastingly grateful to me for telling you about it if you select your coat from their large stock.

A Magic Fairy Wand

touched my hand last week as I was walking through Filene's Toilet Good Department, first floor. It doesn't sound true, but it really is, that Karde Tonic White instantly whitens the skin. One of my hands looked so different from the other after Miss Emma Harding, who is demonstrating it, had applied it to the skin, that you'd really never know that they were supposed to match. It contains an oil base which leaves the skin soft and supple, and an antiseptic sterilizer which keeps it clean and healthy. Its astringent properties refine the texture of the skin, while an excellent bleach within this magic compound whitens the skin. It also looks, when you have used it, as if you had used powder and no powder is necessary. It's the last exquisite touch that milady uses when she is dressing and is used on the arms, hands, neck and face. A large size bottle is priced a $5, medium size at $2.50, and you can purchase an introductory bottle for $1. Miss Harding will be there each day this week anyway, and even if you don't get there until she has gone back to New York, you can buy Karde Tonic White just the same. It truly is the most amazing preparation that I have ever seen.

Beneficial Indeed

are the rays of the sun. And for those who are troubled with much dandruff or with a scaly scalp I have a secret. Our friend, Mr. John P. Hughes at 218 Tremont St., Room 508, right opposite the Majestic Theatre, is giving a soothing healing ointment with which the scalp is gently massaged into the scalp and then a health giving infra red ray is applied which causes the ointment to work to the roots of the hair and into the scalp. Not all shampoos are suitable for at this shop, and lovely permanent waves are priced at $9. Call Capitol 3609 for appointments.

Brown Is Truly

the leading color for Fall and stands first in the realm of the Modern. Almost every dress has its accompanying touch of brown and Miss Evelyn at 8 Winter Street has a fine assortment of dresses. You'll find at her shop all the very latest styles, in swanky jerseys, new tweeds and sport dresses. Satins and silks are the new silk dresses are priced at $18.75. You can buy a lovely frock there and the prices run from $5 up. It is always well to be prepared with an "Evelyn" dress for any occasion!

Two-Toned and Sporty and fashionable indeed are the wool and rayon sweaters on sale this week for the small price of $3.85 at the Sports Wear Department on the fourth floor of the R. H. Stearns Company. They come in dark blue and gray, lovely brown and silver, green, red, and lighter blue and they wear are just the thing to wear with your pleated skirts for sport. The sizes are 34 to 42. Sweaters still hold high in the choice of Miss Modern for sport wear and indeed now they are correct for almost any daytime occasion. You'll love these sporty sweaters, Anne!

5.95 & 4.95 Hats on Sale at Lotty's Hat Shop at 8 Winter st., 5th floor, are very smart and good looking for fall, for she has just received a new shipment of lovely one-of-a-kind French felts, French soiells and velvets, in all shades, styles and large head sizes. These are regular $8 and $10 values. They come in all the wanted colors. There are special values in all the higher-priced hats. Some priced at $3 and $4 come in all the popular colors and styles. Those moulded to the head are priced at $6.50 and up. This shop is open every night until 6:30 for your convenience.

You'll Be Pleased

if you visit Mae Jones' Beauty Shop at 110 Tremont Street for she specializes in lovely high grader Frederic's Vita Tonic compound permanents. Regularly these rare permanents are priced at $12 but she is offering a special price of only $10. You'll be astonished indeed at the real perfection of her work, as I was and you'll often be calling Liberty 0026 to make an appointment for one of her famous finger waves or a marcel. She is also going to personally conduct a class to teach beauty culture and will tell you all about it when you visit her.

Here's a Bargain Indeed for those who are looking for an evening gown. At the shop of Mendelsohn at 59 Temple Place there is a sale going on of slightly used evening gowns for the small prices of $5. They come in all colors and are made of taffeta, georgette, white satin and lace. It wouldn't cost much to have them cleaned and then they'd be just like new. New evening dresses or bridal gowns are priced at $10 to $15. Lovely misty wedding veils are $5 and up. And of course you remember that this is the shop where you may hire bridal or evening gowns at a reasonable price.

This Is for You my dear, and it's the nicest box of "Apleta," a yummy paste made of juice crushed from apples ripened in sunny California, with delicious nuts combined. It is called "The Confection of the Fairies." I got it for you at the new Candy Section of Jordan Marsh Company on the first floor of the Main Store. An old Spanish courtyard has been turned into a room where there is a full line of all good candies that you could wish for. Favors for bridge parties give color to the shop and a Frigidaire is installed to keep the candies fresh. You must visit this new shop!

So You Are Letting

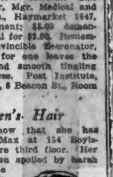
your hair grow, my Anne! If you are worried about those troublesome ends come along with me to the Beauty Shop on the third floor of Gilchrist's, for Mme. Elysia is there this week to demonstrate the adjustment and arrangement of those "natural part" transformations we've heard so many nice things about. They are made in Paris, are light weight and are usually priced at $30 for ordinary hair, $35 for gray shades. The prices are now $25 and $30. Smaller transformations are priced at $22.50 and $17.50, and other pieces are especially designed for the debutante's growing hair. Isn't this nice to know?

The Zeeronator

a peerless marvel in power unmatched, the Zeeronator leaves physical massage given with Dr. John Price's medical "Absorption" facials at NO extra cost. It gives a beauty that is lasting, because it removes the cause in her own face. A natural, not put on make up but a new health through stimulation of facial nerves, glands and blood vessels, until their regular medical facial banishes blackheads, pimples and wrinkles, rectifying flabby folds, filling out a thin neck and restoring a perfect contour. Call Mrs. Gardner, Mgr., Medical and Facial Depts., Haymarket 1647, for appointment; $5.00 demonstration facial for $2.50. Remember their invincible Zeeronator, two facials for one leaves the face soft and smooth, tingling with freshness. Post Institute, Beacon Bldg., 6 Beacon St., Room 910.

Karen's Hair

is lovely now that she has visited L. Max at 154 Boylston st., entire third floor. Her hair had been spoiled by harsh dyes and he brought it back to its original color. Now it is gleaming in waves. There are Daylight Booths at this well-equipped shop and thus the hair may be matched perfectly without artificial light by L. Max who had charge of the hair dyeing department at the National Hairdressers' convention held here in Boston a while ago. For artistic permanents or finger waving, done by expert operators, call Capitol 8521 for appointment.



I have been waiting to tell you this, for I knew you'd be so terribly disappointed if I told you something that did not come true.

I am so happy my dear that it's really and truly true that next Monday Katherine and Rae are actually coming in on an early train and spend the whole day with us.

They have written me this week that we are to meet them early and they have listed in part the shops that they want to visit and the gorgeous clothes for Fall they want to find.

We want to make their day the very loveliest they have ever had in Boston, so please be thinking it all over and let's decide before we start just the finest shops to visit.

I hope you'll have next week... our

THE JOSEPH LINDON SMITHS SAIL FOR EGYPT SEEKING LOST TREASURES, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Exploration of Ancient Desert Cities and Temples, Mr. Smith's Plan

THE JOSEPH LINDON SMITHS ARE OFF TO EGYPT. GLOBE trotters, the Smiths, continuously bound to far places on interesting errands. Yesterday they left their pleasant summer home perched high over Dublin Lake, and now displace themselves and their traveling kits aboard the steamship Majestic bound for the land of smart hotels and ancient monuments. Not that existence in the former particularly interests the Smiths at this time. Very well versed in the social game are they. Friends everywhere about the world are theirs, so they may indulge a propensity for the merely frivolous at any time in the fashionable centres of several continents. Egypt this autumn to Mr. Smith means serious work with the Dr. Reisner expedition that searches about amid centuries-old ruined wonders.

ALONG WITH LEARNED ARCHEOLOGISTS AND SUN-HELMETED explorers he will delve for lost treasures in buried cities. And probably in spare moments do some brilliant things in water colors or oils, for it is ever the Smith way to record thus odd bits he finds in fantastic spots. His venture into Indo-China brought rich reward to this painter-man in the way of sacred temples and inscriptions for his brush. On that pilgrimage his clever daughter, Miss Rebecca Smith, now Mrs. William Ambrose Taylor, Jr., was his companion, sharing the merry vicissitudes of travel by river boat, by ox cart and elephant back into the far interior to mossgrown temples. She has also delved with him into the native Indian life in New Mexico and painted stroke for stroke with her father.

IN FACT NEW MEXICO HELD THEM ALL ENTHRALLED FOR A while. They gave much time and attention to that country of glittering sands and painted mountains. Of course, Mr. Smith and his elder daughter painted there. And Mrs. Smith studied the Indian and his native arts and became most enthusiastic over the red man's gifts. Several exhibitions and an awakening interest in the cause have pleasantly resulted. Mrs. Taylor and her husband are to spend the winter in Santa Fe, going down there that Mr. Taylor may do some literary work, after a summer visit with the Smiths at Loon Point, Dublin. The second daughter, formerly Miss Frances Smith, is now Mrs. Raymond Otis, and the third is Miss Lois Smith, a student at Westover.

THAT MR. AND MRS. SMITH have no Boston address any longer is a matter of great regret to their friends and to the ardent souls who adored getting the Smiths to do something specially clever for benefits and balls. A year or two ago the house in Mount Vernon st. was disposed of and Smith goods and chattels were trundled over to New York for use during the somewhat brief intervals that could be spent there between journeys up and down the earth. Mrs. Smith was Miss Corinna Putnam and the small Taylor daughter brought first great grandparent honors to Maj. George Haven Putnam of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are to be away a month or two on their present trip and then will be in New York about holiday time.

FEW BRIDES ACHIEVE THE distinction of looking as lovely in bridal trappings as Mrs. Harrison Gardner. And few could be more sweet to the eye than she, in her "going away" costume. Society's very newest bride sailed away with her young husband yesterday on the inevitable foreign journey fashionable newly-weds indulge themselves in. Their steamer was the Laconia and there were well wishing friends on the dock to wave them bon voyage. The wedding brought out the entire world of importance and social place. Ascension Memorial Church in Ipswich never held a more impressive wedding company than when the John Silsbee Lawrence's elder daughter wed with Mr. Gardner. And Gravelly Brook Farm was a charming setting for the wedding breakfast.

WHEN ONE HAS MUCH LEISURE and a purse bountifully filled, even the most fanciful of whims and wishes may be indulged. Such a wish as Jacob Kilburn, former Bostonian, now of London, fancies. He dotes on Boston and the Hotel Somerset to such an extent that he wishes to celebrate a golden wedding anniversary here and forthwith makes plans to that end. Sentimental reasons and a desire to renew friendships made years ago bring him and Mrs. Kilburn several thousand miles to celebrate this very special occasion. He writes from Nice that he and she will sail from England early in October, and other arrangements made thus at long distance set the wedding celebration date for December 4.

SEVERAL HUNDRED GUESTS will be asked and the Somerset's handsomest apartments will be ready for hosts and guests to make the celebration everything so important a day should be. The Kilburns were married here, their sons were born here, and they have friends and relatives here. So it is very close to their hearts' desire to celebrate a 50th wedding day in Boston. Some elaborate plans are on foot, also carried on via long distance mail. These involve a decorative motif that will tax the ingenuity of Boston's most gifted florist and the talent at concocting gastronomic effusions of a chef internationally renowned. A golden wedding anniversary calls for touches individually distinctive, and no stone will be left unturned to achieve that happy result.

HUNTS SET HOSTESS

Mrs. Frederick L. Dabney will entertain the Norfolk Hunts set next Saturday after the run of the hounds. She and Mr. Dabney are popular young set members with a pleasant establishment out in Dover.

Come to Hub for Golden Wedding

BY TWOS AND THREES BOSTONIANS of the upper crust come sailing home, or depart for a winter abroad. No ocean aristocrat but has inscribed on its passenger list names of a fashionable interest. The steamship France brings in, in a day or two Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sturgis Grew who went abroad in the early summer exodus for their regular season. The Ile de France, steaming majestically out of New York a day or two ago, carried away to foreign shores Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pelham Curtis, Sr., of Beacon st. and the North Shore. A family party, concluding a summer at Sorrento, up on the Maine coast, sailed away. They were Mr. and Mrs. L. Excis Rowe, and their small son and daughter. Their steamship also was the giant modernistic liner.

THE F. L. W. RICHARDSONS come flocking home from Europe just in time to celebrate the wedding of Arthur Richardson and Miss Hope Livermore. Going afield for their brides is the way of certain very smart Bostonians and with the happiest of results, as in this case. The future Mrs. Richardson, a stunning young member of the New York creme de la creme, dashes about with the Long Island elite and figures prominently in Newport. Lovely, rose-leaf checked Miss Margery Richardson is in the bridal entourage. Miss Hope Hollins, who came to town as a bridesmaid for the Harding-Hale nuptials, also decorates the wedding scene for Miss Livermore, on Saturday next.

MISS FRANCESCA BRAGGIOTTI makes time between engagements to dash over to Saranac to visit with Miss Maria Braggiotti, who still finds the salubrious air the region just the right thing for her continued residence. The dark-eyed, Francesca has all sorts of bees buzzing, about future plans for the winter that beckon dazzlingly along the path to fame. New York will probably be the chosen field, if this popular society dancer decides to even temporarily desert Boston, which is not likely to be so.

CHINESE INSIST U. S. SALUTE FLAG FIRST

Shanghai, China, Oct. 1 (AP)—Immediate reopening of the U. S. consulate at Nanking seems likely to be delayed in consequence of a tangle between the American and Chinese authorities over a question of diplomatic etiquette.

The question hinges upon the salute to be given at the time of the reopening. Nationalist officials having refused to salute the flag as it is being hoisted, but have indicated that they would be willing to salute it if the United States should salute first, thus indicating recognition of the Nationalist government. This is understood to be acceptable to American officials in Nanking.

The American authorities, although not communicative, are understood to feel that a salute by the Nationalists is necessary in order to amend the flag desecration at the time of the Nanking incident of February 24, 1927.

It is expected that the tangle will be solved shortly. The matter is believed to have been referred to Washington.

SKIRTS TO COVER LEGS OF BULGARIAN WOMEN

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 1 (AP)—All women employes in the state and city governments in Bulgaria must wear a standard uniform with a skirt extending well below the knee and sleeves coming down to the wrist under a decree issued by the government today.

Employes wearing dresses with low necks or knee length skirts will be dismissed.

Wales in Pink Shirt, Two Hats, Sets Golf Style

Mombasa, British East Africa, Oct 1 (AP)—The Prince of Wales set a new golfing fashion for Africa by using two hats and wearing a pink shirt on the links. One of the hats, a stiff brim affair, was used when making a shot, the other, an ancient, floppy felt, was donned as he walked down the fairways.

The special train on which the prince and his younger brother, the Duke of Gloucester, are travelling, is an ornate affair. The color scheme of the coaches is cream and maroon and the door fittings and similar trimmings are of solid silver. The bedrooms of the travelers are arranged so as to give access to an open platform and there is a separate dining compartment and lounge in the car of the heir to the British throne.

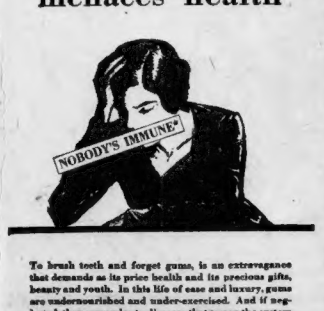
This extravagance menaces health



To brush teeth and forget gums, is an extravagance that demands as its price health and its precious gifts, beauty and youth. In this life of ease and luxury, gums are undernourished and under-exercised. And if neglected, they surrender to diseases that sweep the system and often cause loss of teeth.

Be liberal with yourself. Take advantage of the best modern dentistry. See your dentist every six months. Continue to brush your teeth. But also, every morning and night, brush gums vigorously with the dentifrice specifically made for the purpose . . . Forhan's for the Gums.

When you have used this dentifrice for a few days you'll notice a vast improvement in the way your gums look and feel. In addition, note how effectively and safely Forhan's cleans teeth white and protects them from causes of decay. Get a tube from your druggist and start using it today.

Bond Issue to Build Hearst's New Plant

New York, Oct. 1—Construction of a new plant for the Detroit Times will be financed with a part of the proceeds of an issue of $2,500,000 Detroit Times (The Times Publishing Co.) 6 per cent serial debentures which have been sold to Halsey, Stuart & Co. The new plant is made necessary by the rapid growth of the newspaper.

The Detroit Times has had one of the most remarkable growths in the history of American newspapers. Starting with a circulation of less than 26,000 daily and no Sunday edition, it has increased its daily evening net paid circulation to more than 300,000, with the exception of Saturday, and its Sunday circulation to more than 325,000, according to independent reports. It has shown an average gain in daily circulation during the last five years more than twice as great as that shown by any other newspaper in Detroit.

The new building will be well-located in the metropolitan section of Detroit. It will be six stories high and will be used in entirety by the newspaper. The company will purchase a substantial amount of new equipment, and through the economies which it hopes to effect by use of the new building and equipment should materially increase profits.

All of the outstanding capital stock of the Times Publishing Company, except directors' qualifying shares, is owned and controlled by William Randolph Hearst. The publishing interests of Mr. Hearst consist of a chain of twenty eight newspapers serving eighteen important cities, extending from coast to coast, and a group of seven nationally known magazines, which, together, comprise the largest publishing business in the world.

These newspapers, which are read by more than 20,000,000 people, spent $2,500,000 in telegraph and cable tolls last year

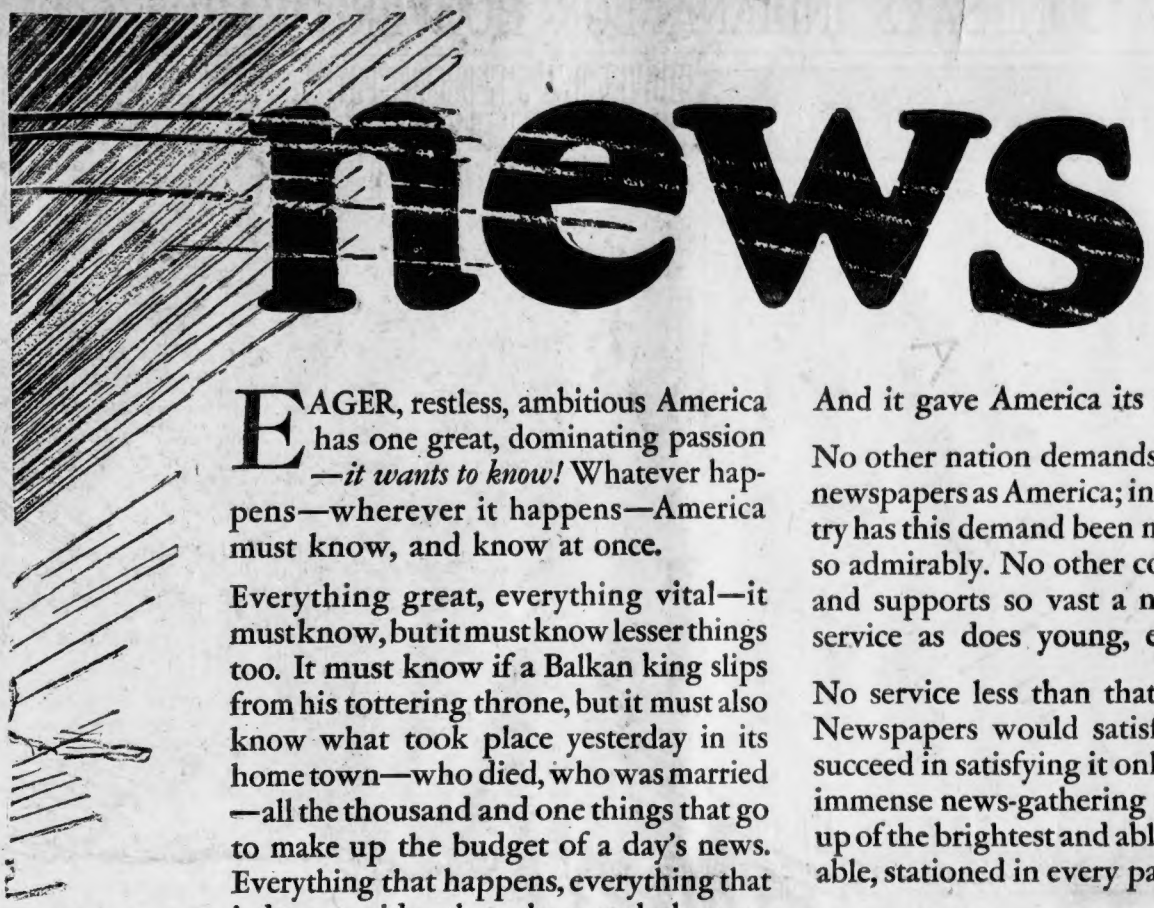
HEARST



EAGER, restless, ambitious America has one great, dominating passion —it wants to know! Whatever happens—wherever it happens—America must know, and know at once.

Everything great, everything vital—it must know, but it must know lesser things too. It must know if a Balkan king slips from his tottering throne, but it must also know what took place yesterday in its home town—who died, who was married —all the thousand and one things that go to make up the budget of a day's news. Everything that happens, everything that is done or said or thought, must be known.

This eager, healthy curiosity, this desire to know, this eternal search for new, full light on every subject, dominates America. It has made America what it is. It developed America—discovered its gold and coal and oil—harnessed its electricity—founded its cities and schools—made its farms—built its factories.

And it gave America its newspapers.

No other nation demands so much of its newspapers as America; in no other country has this demand been met so fully and so admirably. No other country calls for and supports so vast a news-supplying service as does young, eager America.

No service less than that of the Hearst Newspapers would satisfy it, and they succeed in satisfying it only because their immense news-gathering service is made up of the brightest and ablest men obtainable, stationed in every part of the globe.

Hearst Newspapers are the greatest carriers of the commodity of news the world has ever seen. They comb the world for news—unceasingly, unfailingly—that in eighteen great cities giant presses may speed it out to the more than twenty million readers of Hearst Newspapers who "want to know"—and know at once.

SENATOR WATSON SAYS INDIANA FOR HOOVER; WARNS G. O. P.

TAGGART IS GIVING HOT BATTLE

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
(Noted Political Analyst)

French Lick, Ind., Oct. 1—Thomas Taggart, perhaps the ablest Democratic leader in the state's history, sums up the situation in Indiana as follows:

"We will win the state ticket without a doubt. Local issues entirely outside of the Hoover-Smith controversy are making it an uphill fight for the Republican state candidates. I can't see a loophole anywhere.

"On the national end it is a little different. I am not making the same claims that I am making for our state ticket, but at that we have a fifty fifty chance to bind the state's electoral votes in the Democratic list.

"Our situation in the south half of the state could be better. While Smith is making one of the greatest campaigns we have ever known. The farmers are not entirely convinced as yet that the Democratic party offers a specific remedy for their ills.

MAY FOOL EXPERTS

"It is the lack of a definite program, not merely a general statement of sympathy and intention to aid them, that is holding back many of our farmers, although in some sections of the state the feeling against the Republican administration is very bitter.

"Many farmers will vote the Democratic ticket for the first time. But I think all you experts are going to be fooled with the vote in the north end of the State in the industrial centers. If half what I hear is true Governor Smith will get a whopper of a vote in Lake County.

If he does, and the farmers are not pulled into the Republican column by November 6 I would say that Indiana would be doubtful on the national end until the ballots were counted. It might turn out that the State is Democratic both locally and nationally."

U. S. Senator James Watson does not agree with Taggart on the Indiana outlook. While appreciating the fact that the Republicans have no walkaway this time, his reports, he told the writer a couple days ago, indicate that Hoover will roll up a very large lead outside of the Gary, Hammond, Indiana Harbor district, and that while the Coolidge and Harding pluralities may be reduced he is satisfied that the Hoover lead will be many thousands.

By the way, has perhaps the best Republican organization in the country in this fight. They have organized each county down to voting precincts and the women are working with great enthusiasm.

WATSON GIVES WARNING

It is this vote in the south half of the State that is likely to cause more havoc among the normally Democratic ranks than the loss that will be suffered by the Republicans in the farm sections.

Hence during the campaign Indiana with a plurality of 185,000 and Coolidge four years ago increased it to a clear cut majority over 400,000 Davis and La Follette of 233,000.

What is now worrying the Republican leaders not a little are the rumblings heard among the negro voters of the State. It is estimated that fully 130,000 negroes are eligible to vote. Republican national headquarters does not seem to be much concerned over these reports.

Senator Watson told his intimate friends that the Republican management is altogether too high brow and that if the leaders are not a little more circumspect they may hear something drop in Indiana. That will give them a big scare. What seems to be the trouble is that the wet negro folk are talking very kindly of Governor Smith.

In the Hearst nation-wide poll today Hoover is getting approximately 57 per cent of the Indiana vote, the totals being Hoover 17,861, Smith 13,595. Of the women's vote, Hoover is polling almost two to one.

It was said at headquarters that wherever possible the source of the liquor was being traced and that speedy action would be taken. One of the dead and three of those treated at hospitals were women. Six of the hospital patients were said to be in coma from which physicians feared they might not recover.

Hearst Papers' NATION-WIDE POLL

HOOVER REAPS HARVEST OF LABOR AID

L. G. Illnes, former La Follette leader in Pennsylvania.

TO GET LA FOLLETTE VOTES

The trend of opinion among the labor leaders, according to their messages to Hoover's managers, indicates the Republican nominee will get a majority of the vote that went to the late Robert M. La Follette in the 1924 campaign.

At Newark Hoover compared American wages with those of European and Asiatic nations on the basis of purchasing a pound of "bread and butter." He demonstrated that American wages are paid from three to 15 times as much as other nationalities.

"It (this prosperity) spells better homes, automobiles, radios and a thousand things for the family that were utterly unknown a generation ago and are now utterly unknown to the average citizen in most countries of the world.

"Continuous employment and prosperity of labor depend upon the continuance of Republican policies."

Labor apparently took him at his word, at Illnes, the La Follette leader, wrote: "The working people of America have no desire to be required to be living standards such as prevail in Europe and they will refuse to take any chances in that direction. For this reason they will support Herbert Hoover for President."

SPEAK FOR TYPOS

August F. Moltz of the Allied Printing Trades Council and James L. Montgomery, secretary of the Typographical Union, expressed the same conviction.

Moltz said Hoover's Newark speech "rang true and will be answered in unmistakable terms on election day by the industrial workers of America."

Holt, the Signalmen's president, wrote Hoover that his views on maintenance of prosperity through high wages and restricted immigration and his prevention of unemployment should meet the approval of all organized labor.

Hutcheson, the carpenters' president, said Hoover's declarations "should appeal to anyone who is sincerely interested in the welfare of our workers."

Whitney, the trainmen's president, declared his support because of the very favorable position taken on many fundamental principles which are of great concern to the millions who toil."

Hoover worked today upon correspondence at his headquarters. Having completed the speech he will deliver at Elizabethtown, Penn., next Saturday afternoon. He will leave here Friday night for the Tennessee town and return from there Saturday night.

Curtis Is Warned to Give His Voice Rest

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 1 (AP)—Another day of rest was ordered Senator Charles Curtis, the Republican vice-presidential nominee, at his home here today preparatory to departure tonight for Chicago, where he will confer this week on future campaign plans.

Aside from having to shake hands with old friends here with his left hand because of the injury to the right, the Senator seemed little the worse today for his strenuous campaign in Kansas, which was completed Saturday night at Enid, Okla.

Doctors have ordered the vice-presidential nominee to give his voice an immediate rest and for this reason he is withholding a decision on campaign plans for the future. However, he will keep his engagement in Chicago on Wednesday night and at Gary, Ind., on Friday, but he indicated today he might be forced to make both addresses brief on account of the condition of the throat.

SMITH SPEAKS IN ROCHESTER

stood up most of the way, acknowledging the cheers with a wave of his light gray fedora. The brown derby was missing, the governor having "swapped it for a dog" at Milwaukee.

The police had great difficulty clearing the way sufficiently for the governor to get into the hotel, where State leaders were waiting to confer with him on the selection of the November ticket by the State convention, which opened at 11 o'clock, and after a session, in which William Church Osborn delivered the keynote speech, adjourned to today.

At tonight's session Oliver Cabana, Jr., of Buffalo, will be elected permanent chairman. A platform will be adopted and at 10 o'clock Governor Smith will make one of the major speeches of his presidential campaign. The State ticket will be nominated at the closing session tomorrow.

Despite the repeated declaration that he is not a candidate because of his health, Franklin D. Roosevelt, former assistant Secretary of the Navy, may be drafted for Governor.

It was reported the Governor had talked with Mrs. Roosevelt, who is attending the convention, and that she gave the impression her husband would not decline.

If Roosevelt absolutely refuses, it is reported Smith may turn to Josh H. Banton, district attorney of New York; Peter J. Dyck of Albany, Supreme Court Justice Townsend W. Boudder of Brooklyn, or Dr. John H. Finley, former state commissioner of education.

Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson of New York and Seymour Van Santvoord of Troy, were selected as presidential electors at large at a meeting of the Democratic state committee.

Arrest Two, One With Gun, at Smith's Hotel Suite

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 1 (AP)—Two men who attempted to force their way by patrolmen guarding the approach to Governor Smith's suite at the Hotel Seneca, were taken into custody today when officers discovered that one of the two carried a revolver.

They gave their names as Albert Ella, Niagara Falls, and Charles Civiletta, Lockport. Civiletta, who had a permit to carry the gun, told police his brother had been killed in a gang battle four years ago and that he carried the gun for protection.

He proved he was acquainted with a member of the Governor's party, who wished to see when he was pushed by the officers.

The revolver and permit were retained by police. Both men said they were Democrats and attending the State convention as onlookers.

Senate and the oldest member of the W. C. T. U. in the South, announcing she will support Governor Smith's Presidential candidacy.

Mrs. Felton expressed regret over the attacks on Smith by the Rev. John Roach Straton and considered the desertion of the Democratic party by the Southern Methodist women.

13 QUERIES PUT TO HOOVER BY M'KELLAR

Paris, Tenn., Oct. 1 (A.P.)—United States Senator Kenneth D. McKellar of Tennessee in a speech at a Democratic meeting here today, addressed 13 questions to Herbert Hoover, Republican presidential nominee with a request that they be answered later on in Jackson, Elizabethton address Saturday.

The questions follow:

"If elected, will you appoint or continue Andrew W. Mellon, commonly held to be more interested in the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors than any other man in the country, as your Secretary of the Treasury, and by virtue of his office, chief prohibition enforcement officer?

"Should you not appoint Mr. Mellon, would you appoint any one else, directly or indirectly interested in the liquor business, or in any way directly or indirectly connected with those in the liquor business, as your Secretary of the Treasury?

ON THE RACE ISSUE.

"Do you believe in the intermingling of the white and colored races on terms of equality?

"Did you issue an order providing the same equality in the department of Commerce, over which you then presided, last winter or spring?

"Will you appoint colored postmasters, collectors, marshals, district attorneys and other prohibition enforcement officers in the South?

"Did you give out a number of interviews while in the Mississippi valley in the spring of 1927, declaring that the federal government should take over and entirely at its own expense the problem of flood control?

"After you got back to Washington, did you change your mind and urge that a bill be passed providing for 20 per cent local contributions on flood control?

ABOUT FALL AND DENBY

"Do you approve of the leases made by your two associates in President Harding's cabinet, A. B. Fall and Edwin Denby, of the government oil preserves to Doheny and Sinclair, or to their corporations?

"Have you expressed your disapproval of their acts in making these leases?

"Do you approve of the conduct of Will H. Hays and John W. Weeks, members of your associates in the Harding Cabinet, in taking bonds obtained from Harry F. Sinclair in paying the debts of the Republican party, which you now head?

"Would you submit to the Senate and recommend the approval of the treaty recently entered into between Secretary Kellogg and representatives of certain other great nations to outlaw war, in view of the more recent action of France and England in refusing to sign a naval compact against the interests of the United States?"

"Would you recommend to the Congress that Muscle Shoals be retained by the Government always ready for use in time of peace, and for use in time of war and to manufacture fertilizer for the farmers in time of peace, and the necessary power to be sold on terms which will guarantee the use of cheaper light and power rates?

"Would you, under any circumstances, recommend to the Congress that this vast plant be turned over under lease to a private company or companies?

SECOND WITNESS PLACES HOPPE AT SCENE OF QUINCY SLAYING

TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH LUND BACKED BY WESTBERG

dd; but both he and Westberg were positive that the man they saw was the man now on trial for his life. Both witnesses noted his limp, they said.

Westberg admitted some doubt as to his identification of a picture of Hoppe as the man he saw. He said there were three men in the picture shown him by the police and that Hoppe looked more like the man in question than did the others.

He said he picked out Hoppe in that photograph by his build, adding that "the picture looks as though he walked with a limp."

When Lund resumed the witness stand at the opening of today's session Attorney Cassidy brought out through questioning that the witness had known Police Lieut. Fallon of Quincy for eight years. It was to Fallon that Lund told of seeing Hoppe at the murder scene. Lund said he lived near Fallon.

LIT MATCH IN RAIN

Q.—Where was the man you saw that night when you got the matches from him? A.—In the middle of the sidewalk.

Q.—Where did you light the match? A.—On the sidewalk.

Q.—Where did you scratch it? A.—On the sidewalk.

Q.—And it was pouring rain? A.—Yes.

Witness testified that he recognized Hoppe at the Windsor, Vt., jail at a distance of 50 to 60 feet.

Further cross-examination brought out that Lund did not know whether the man he saw at the murder scene was 30 or 50 years old. Neither did he know whether the man was baldheaded. But after looking at a picture shown him by the police lieutenant—a picture of Hoppe—he judged Hoppe to be about 32.

Lund testified that he was approached last March by Lieut. Fallon, who asked him where he was on the night of October 3-4.

"I told Lieut. Fallon about going to the Brockton Fair and returning home about 2 o'clock on the morning of October 4," said the witness. "He asked me if I noticed anything unusual and I told him I met a man on Hancock st. between 1:30 and 2 o'clock."

Q.—So that seeing a man at 1:30 or 2 o'clock on Hancock st., Quincy, limping, was an unusual thing? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you later tell Lieut. Fallon, when somebody from the defense tried to see you? A.—Yes, sir.

WAS TO "KEEP QUIET"

Q.—What did he say to you? A.—He told me if they bothered me to go to the police station.

Q.—Did you understand that you were to keep quiet? A.—Yes.

Q.—And that you had no right to talk to anyone? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know that Lieut. Fallon passed himself off as you named your name? This question was excluded on objection by Asst. District Atty. Kelley.

Q.—Did he tell you he represented himself as you to a certain man? A.—No, sir.

Kelley took the witness for redirect examination.

Q.—To the best of your belief, knowledge and recollection, is the man you see in the courtroom the man you saw on Hancock st., between 1:30 and 2 a. m., October 4? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you at any time had any doubt in your mind that he was the same man? This was objected to and excluded.

Q.—Have you any question in your own mind that he is the man? A.—No, sir.

Atty. Cassidy—Are you absolutely sure? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Are you as sure about that as you are of other things you have testified to? A.—Yes.

John R Westberg, 18, formerly of Quincy, now of Springfield, testified that he was with Lund on the night of October 3-4 last year.

He said Rim-1 and he left a Quincy restaurant about 1:45 and went up Hancock st. in their automobile. He went into the Peerless garage on Hancock st. to borrow a wrench so that he could loosen a nut to open the top of the windshield so he could see. It was raining heavily.

After returning the wrench he went back to the car and took out cigarettes. Neither he nor Lund had a match.

Q.—Did you then observe anyone on the street? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who? A.—A man coming down on the other side of the street.

Q.—Did you notice anything about him? A.—He walked with a limp.

Q.—Did Lund do anything? A.—Yes, he went over to get a match.

Q.—Where was the man when Lund stopped him A.—Right in front of Fill Brothers'.

DESCRIBES "LIMP"

Lund returned to the car, according to Westberg. They saw the man walk towards Quincy sq. Westberg said he again noticed the limp.

Q.—Describe the limp. A.—It was at the knee or the hip.

Witness said he drove a distance and returned past the spot on Hancock st. later, but saw nobody there.

Q.—When was the first time after October 3 that you made known to anyone that you saw a man there on the early morning of October 4? A.—December 10.

Q.—To whom? A.—Officer James Baker of the Quincy police.

Westberg said he was shown a picture of three men by Lieut. Fallon. He said he picked out "the man on the left" as the man he saw on October 4. He testified to making a trip to Vermont state prison and said that on the way he was told he was going to Identify Hoppe.

He said that while standing on the steps of the mess hall at the prison he recognized Hoppe walking toward him, a man in uniform behind him.

Q.—How far away was he then A.—About 60 to 70 feet.

Q.—What did you notice about him? A.—A limp.

Q.—Anything else? A.—His build.

Q.—At the time you saw him did you do anything? A.—I recognized him.

Q.—Before that had you been talking with anyone about Mr. Hoppe? A.—No.

Westberg said he and Lund were standing together.

CORROBORATES LUND

Q.—Did you expect to see Hoppe while you were on the mess hall steps A.—No.

Q.—Now then, is he or is he not the man that you saw in Quincy on the morning of October 4? A.—He is the man.

Q.—Is there any question in your mind that he is the man that you saw that morning? A.No, sir.

Q.—Do you see that man anywhere in this courtroom that you saw in Windsor? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—Over there in the cage (pointing to Hoppe).

Q.—Do you see the man anywhere in the courtroom that you saw in Quincy October 4? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—Over there in the cage.

Hoppe was chewing gum and was slouched in a corner of the cage. He was displaying little interest in the identification, looking as if he took it all as a matter of course.

Cross-examining Westberg, Attorney Cassidy asked him if it was his first experience in identifying anyone, and witness said it was.

Q.—Did you stop on the way to Brockton? A.—Yes, at the Peerless garage to get a wrench.

Q.—What time did you arrive at the garage? A.—I'm all mixed up.

Q.—About what? A.—The time of leaving, coming back and the time of starting. Now I've got it. It was not on the way out to Brockton that we stopped for a wrench.

Q.—You want to take back your answer? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know who the garage man was from whom you got the wrench? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Ever see him before? A.—No.

Q.—Since? A.—No, sir

Q.—Could you identify him again if you saw him? A.—I think so.

He testified he and Lund were both on the sidewalk near the car when they saw the man identified as Hoppe coming down the street on the other side.

SURE HE WORE COAT

Q.—How far away when you first saw him? A.—About 60 feet.

Q.—How was he dressed? A.—Overcoat or raincoat.

Q.—Did he have a hat on? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Are you sure he wore a raincoat or overcoat? A.—I'm positive.

Q.—Where was he? A.—By the door of the Star garage, at the end of that building nearest Quincy sq.

Cassidy called witness' attention to the blueprint plan on the courtroom wall, and showed him that the door of the Star garage was on the side farthest from Quincy sq.

Witness retracted his testimony and said that he saw the man at the Quincy sq. end of the building, where he thought the door was.

Q.—The man was close to the building? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What else did you notice about him, besides that he wore an overcoat? A.—I noticed his build. He was medium build.

Q.—Did you notice his height? A.—Yes, about 5 feet 7.

Q.—And his walk? A.—Yes, he limped.

Q.—Show the jury just how he limped.

The witness left the jury box and demonstrated, limping on his left leg.

Westberg admitted he was not particularly interested in the man but watched primarily to see if Lund was successful in getting a match.

HAZY ABOUT LIGHTS

Westberg could not remember if there were any electric lights on the side of the street where he said he saw Hoppe, nor if there was a light in Fill Bros.' hardware store. It was this store that the man who shot Patrolman Hollis was robbing.

He said he first spoke of the case to Motorcycle Officer James ("Two-Gun") Baker of Quincy, and that after he described the man he had seen, Baker said to him: "That might be Hoppe. That's the man they have in mind."

Westberg said this talk with Baker was in December. Between then and the following March he said he visited Baker's house three or four times a week. After that he had conversations with Lieut. Fallon.

Q.—You say you saw a man's face at 2 a. m. in a fog and that you saw his profile so well that you can now identify him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Which side of his face did you see? A.—The left.

Q.—You say that from the glance you had at that man you now can identify him in this picture? A.—Yes, by his build. The picture looks as though he walked with a limp.

Q.—So you can tell in a picture whether or not a man limps? A.—Yes.

Witness said there was "a little doubt" in his mind as to whether the man in the picture was the man he saw in front of the hardware store that night. Then he admitted that his memory was bad at times.

The witness will recall being shown a cell from which Hoppe escaped at that prison.

OLD MAN ASKS TO END DAYS AS PAUPER

Father Time has backed him to the wall and William H. Tucker, Vermont octogenarian, today admitted in Municipal Court that his chance "to make good" was forever lost.

A decrepit, unshaven hulk of humanity, Tucker ambled into the Hanover st. police station before dawn today and begged to be arrested so that he might spend his last days as a pauper in a State institution.

To Capt. Arthur B. McConnell he unfolded the story of his arrival in Boston three days ago from Vermont to get a job, his failure in that attempt and his subsequent lack of funds for food and shelter.

The Hanover st. captain, touched by the ragged and cadaverous appearance of his caller, took advantage of the vagrancy law to give Tucker over to the State authorities and, accordingly, sent him to court today to answer to that charge.

Judge John Duff, before whom Tucker pleaded guilty to the vagrancy complaint, was forced to disappoint the "vagrant" because the statutes forbid the confinement of a defendant on a State farm unless a citizen of Massachusetts.

Probation Officer Thomas Davis then took charge of Tucker and brought him to City Hall in an effort to have him admitted to the Tewksbury almshouse, as records showed he was born in Andover.

5000 CHILDREN SEE BROCKTON FAIR OPEN

Brockton, Oct. 1—The "children's hour" ran into a boom today when the 55th annual Brockton Fair got under way for its first day in a week's run.

Everything was for the youngsters, from admission fees to participation in the major events of the programs.

More than 5000 children swarmed the broad terrain for the opening day and, with their accompanying elders, composed an attendance double that figure.

Young Clifford H. Pratt rode Jolly Boy and won the $25 prize in the Shetland pony division. Class 63, for ponies 42 inches or under and for riders of not more than 14 years.

The shetland pony division drew most of the youngsters' attention.

In the opening day trotting events, the first of three heats in the 2:11 trot was won by Czar Worthy, owned by Henry Bowles of Springfield, with John Leonard at the reins. The Czar's time was 2:08¾ and he qualified for the final in which $2000 is at stake.

Children's day was filled with patriotic exercises for the youngsters in a salute to the flag, sports, a juvenile horse show, pony riding, pageantry and child dancing.

There were athletic events for the boys and girls, a soccer game between grammar school boys, a junior stock and poultry judging and at night fireworks.

All schools in Brockton and a majority of those in Plymouth County were closed for the day and the youngsters surged themselves on peanuts, ice cream and tonic.

Sees Both Poor and Rich Getting Richer in U. S.

Lakeland, Fla., Oct. 1 (AP)—"There was never a time before when the worker was as well off as he is today, James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, declared today in dedicating the national home of the United Brotherhood, Carpenters and Joiners of America.

"That is not to say that there is not still room for improvement," the secretary said. "It is to say that there is no place in the mind of an intelligent man for the pessimistic claim once advanced by Socialists that the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer.

"The poor are not getting poorer; they are getting richer, too.

"Moreover, for the first time in human history there is reason for thinking involuntary poverty can be conquered.

"It is not going to be conquered by agitators, much less by politicians. It is going to be conquered by the application of labor saving machinery to industry."

WAR STATUE IN DAVIS SQ. SOMERVILLE, IN STORAGE

Workmen today began removing the statue in Davis sq., dedicated to Somerville soldiers and sailors in the World War. By JACK CONWAY

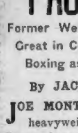
JOE MONTE, the Brockton heavyweight, and Tiger Payne, heavyweight champion of Australia, will head one of the greatest all-star cards ever staged in Boston when they clash in a 10-round bout at the Arena tonight at an Arena A. C. show.

JACK BRITTON, former welterweight champion of the world, will tackle Pete Pacheco, Indian welterweight, in another 10-round affair. Britton, 42 years young, has won 13 out of 15 bouts since he started a comeback drive. At Lynn on last Monday he gave Mickey Sears a boxing lesson.



Jack Conway

Larry Brignolia of Cambridge, who has been winning steadily in New York and Pennsylvania rings, will oppose Young Grandberg of Worcester in a third 10-round mill.

Col. Rob McKirdy has Henry Janco of Lawrence and Connie Holmes of Providence paired for an eight-round mill. These boys engaged in two torrid mixups at Fort Banks during the summer season. One tussle was a draw, while Janco was awarded a questionable decision in the other.

Bennie Zabull, Johnny Buckley's new heavyweight star, will tackle Joe Cabana of the Cape in a four-round mill.

THE Monte-Payne bout should be a thriller. It is the third time that these heavy hitters have met. Their other two tussles were staged in New York. In the first encounter Monte lost on a foul in four rounds, while the second engagement was even.

Tom McArdle, matchmaker at Madison Square Garden, was angling for a rubber match when Col. McKirdy stepped in and signed up this team for Boston.

Payne knocked out Johnny Squires in a punch. Squires recently went ten rounds with Johnny Risko.

Monte has boxed in New York more often than any other New England fighter. His aggressive style of milling has made him a red hot favorite with Gotham fans in his last appearance in a Boston ring. Joe knocked out Hambone Kelley.

THERE is intense interest in the meeting between Britton and Pacheco. Britton was always a big Boston favorite. He fought some of his greatest battles here with Ted (Kid) Lewis, Mike Glover, Lloyd Sheviin, Mike O'Dowd, Joe Eagan and Eddie Murphy as opponents.

Jack retired from the boxing game with a fortune of $125,000. He lost his life's earnings in Florida real estate. He then returned to the ring. He has been remarkably successful. He believes he can lick all of the present-day crop of welterweights.

Pacheco has engaged in a couple of tough fights here with Charley Donovan and is of the opinion he carries too many guns for Britton.

BRIGNOLIA and Grandberg, a couple of punchers, should furnish a slugging match.

Janco and Holmes are bitter rivals and in the past have come through with sparkling matches.

The opening prelims are also expected to be lively affairs.

Lucy Recs Only Undefeated Team

Woodsies split even over the weekend, winning over the Clamdiggers Saturday, 1 to 0, and losing to Fall River, 3 to 0, by same score.

Saturday's victory over the Clamdiggers gave Hub fans hope in the title race, but the Kenseo boys from Fall River was in top form and ran out easy winners.

The Nationals, by their victory over the Brooklyn team, regained the lead in the league and Fall River moved into second place. Brooklyn dropping from the top to third.

The Fall River 2nds met with their first reverse Saturday in the State League. Whittalls defeated them 7 to 6 at the Sutton Lane grounds. This leaves the Lusitania eleven the only undefeated team in the circuit.

Surely, This Must Have Been Two Other Fellows

London, Oct. 1 (INS)—A Central News dispatch from Naples this afternoon quoted Gene Tunney in an alleged interview with the Gazzetta Dello Sport as saying he has not retired from the prize ring for good.

Tunney was quoted as saying he is willing to meet any logical contender for the heavyweight title, but that he would "not fight Dempsey again for less than a million dollars."

Winning Polo Lineup to Remain Same

Westbury, N. Y., Oct. 1 (INS)—Encouraged by their great triumph over the Argentine riders in the first game of the international polo series the United States four will stand pat on its lineup for the second and what they hope will be the deciding game of the series.

The unexpected victory over the South American has given the team all the confidence that it needs and they are now favorites to end the match on Wednesday.

RANGER ELEVEN SEEKING GAMES

The Ranger A. C. of South Boston would like to meet any 129-125-pound team in the state. They would prefer to play away from home. For details call Lewis Polzoo any night between 6 and 7, South Boston 2594-W.

HEARST RIFLE SHOOT PRIZES INCREASED

The War Department, acting under orders of Maj.-Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States army, is making extensive preparations for the 48th annual rifle matches for the William Randolph Hearst trophies.

More than 400 teams from colleges, high schools and military academies in the United States are entered in the competition for the coming year and because of the steadily increasing enrollment; many additional prizes are offered.

Besides sending instructions to commanding generals to give their full co-operation to the matches, Maj.-Gen. Summerall issued the following statement:

"The National Hearst Rifle Trophy Competition among units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps furnishes a valuable incentive to all rifle practice.

"The War Department is glad to lend its cooperation for the success of this competition, not only on account of the military benefits, but also because rifle practice is of value to the individual as a development of physical coordination."

Maj.-Gen. Paul Malone, commandant of the sixth corps area, Chicago, has been interested to designate an official referee.

Permanent trophies will be awarded to the national champions in each division, while shields and cups will go to the sectional winners. Gold wrist watches are to be given to individual champions in each section; and gold or silver medals to all members of the winning teams.

MR. BOSTON By Jack Conway

"SO it's the Yanks and the Cards," was Mr. Boston's opening shot as he started studying the dope for the World Series. This should be cheerful news to those baseball writers who have been anxious to test the St. Louis brand of beer.

"I understand that beer flows more freely in St. Louis than in any city in the United States. I would not be surprised if one of the political spellbinders claimed that it was good old St. Louis beer which gave the Cards the pep to carry them to victory in a driving pennant race.

"The baseball world will root for the Cards to topple the Yanks. It was ever thus. The public has tired of the long run of victories scored by the Yankees. The mob now wants to see the Yanks knocked off. Two years ago the Cards did this very little thing. Maybe they will repeat in the coming series.

"The Yanks staggered down to the wire and were fortunate they were able to hold off the final rush of the Athletics. The Cards, on the other hand, have played fairly steady ball all season and will go into the big series with heads up and confident in their ability to trounce the Huggies.

"I WAS glad to see the Cards win the National League pennant. I was rooting for them because Rabbit Maranville, my old side kick, happens to be in their lineup.

"Maranville is my idea of a ball player. I believe thousands of Boston fans will agree with me.

"Remember those hectic days back in 1914 when the Braves, with the Rabbit at shortstop, grabbed the National League pennant and won four straight games from the Athletics?

"Maranville and Evers were the backbone of the Braves infield. The Rabbit had the natural sparkle, but it was Evers who schooled him and made him a great infielder.

"Maranville considered Evers the greatest ball player of all time and he obeyed his every order. And Ol' Jawn idolized the Springfield youth.

"FROM Boston Maranville went to Pittsburgh, then to Chicago where he later became manager and from there to Brooklyn. The gang then decided that the Rabbit was all through.

"George Stallings, manager of the 1914 Braves, didn't think so. He added the Rabbit to his Rochester club and the veteran showed so well that he was sought by the Cards.

"Maranville then began to play shortstop like he did for the Braves back in 1914. The result was the team started to win the close games. Killing double plays knocked off enemy rallies, while spectacular vest pocket catches choked off base hits.

"Now the Rabbit faces another World Series. He has the ability and courage which will enable him to star in the big fall classic.

"BOTH Gehrig and the rest of the stars will have their share of the limelight, but none of them will stand up any better in the big test than the Rabbit. He is a true champion and will do his best to carry the day for the Cards. More power to the man who came back."

MANY STARS IN SCHOOL RANKS THIS YEAR

By DICK McSWEENEY

The big upset in Saturday's schoolboy games was the defeat of Salem by Somerville. Even the most enthusiastic Somerville rooters were surprised by the work of their team which held Anderson and McMahon, fleet Salem backs, in check throughout the game.

Rondina played a superb game at left end for Somerville, Anderson's punting helped the Witch City team out of many a tight place but Petersen's kicking for Somerville was just as good. Charley Dickerman of Somerville has a great club.

A better Medford team was held to a tie by Brockton in a game which was marred by penalties for offsides. Wilder and Unma smashed the Brockton line and played well.

Trosky is the best Brockton ballcarrier.

Flashman and Fishman, the Malden backs, played a good game for the Blue and Gold against Providence Tech.

Everett gave Stevens high of New Hampshire a great display of the line strength. Puglicesi and Digby are fine.

The Haverhill-Amesbury game was featured by the punting of Barney, Haverhill left halfback.

Coach Holland of Mechanic Arts has hopes of a successfull season this year. He has a good running back in the person of Joe Fox and two fine punters, Murray and Connolly, both of whom are kicking the oval an average of 40 yards.

John Connell, a veteran, is holding down the center berth, while McManus, a track man, is at right end. Vigneux and G. Kaposous are battling for end positions, and Malkionis, Murray, Peterson, Collins, McLaughlin, Hill, McLellan and W. Kaposous are striving for positions in the line.

Bingham high school has just announced its schedule for this season. Here it is: Oct. 5, Dedham at Hingham; Oct. 12, Abington at Abington; Oct. 19, Whitman at Hingham; Oct. 27, Lincoln, N. H.; Nov. 3, Rockland at Hingham; Nov. 9, Weymouth at Weymouth; Nov. 17, Canton at Canton; Nov. 24, open.

College Elevens Start Big Fall Parade This Week

BIG THREE PLAY THIS SATURDAY

Southern Methodist, Fordham and Notre Dame Should Have Good Year

By BILL GRIMES

With few exceptions, all college teams will swing into action this week, Harvard, Yale and Princeton making their debuts. The Crimson opens the 1928 season with Springfield, Yale takes on the University of Maine, and the Tiger tackles Vermont.

There is little chance of any upsets featuring the opening games as far as Harvard, Yale and Princeton are concerned, but the smaller colleges should offer some stern opposition. Springfield showed up well against E. Stroudsburg, Maine just swamped Rhode Island, and for a green team Vermont did well opposing Columbia.

Naturally the big interest will center around Harvard, Yale and Princeton, but the West Point-Southern Methodist University contest will be keenly watched throughout the Middle West and the Southwest.

GREAT PASSING TEAM

S. M. U. broke into the limelight last season by defeating the University of Missouri, champions of the Missouri valley, and is proclaimed as the greatest passing team in the country. S. M. U. will be without the services of its star passer, Mann, but they have three backs who are the peers of anything in the Southwest.

This game has created far more than the ordinary interest among the Texas football fans and there will be two special trains from Dallas to carry the S. M. U. rooters.

Dartmouth plays that smooth working little Hobart team, which gave the Green one of its best early season tests last year, while Brown meets Worcester Polytech and Rhode Island Providence. Dartmouth and Brown still both be represented by a strong line and fine first string backfield but mediocre replacements.

Boston University, which was overwhelmingly defeated by West Point last Saturday will engage Coach Joe Cowgill's University of New Hampshire charges at Nickerson Field, Riverside.

HOME TEAMS AWAY

All the home talents will be away from home this week-end. There will be no college football in the state of Maine next Saturday. Coach Art Thomason, who piloted Tufts through an undefeated season last year, will have his Brown and Blue boys fighting against Eddie Rounds's Colby team.

Bowdoin and Bates will be at Amherst and Mass. Aggies, respectively, and with Maine at New Haven, the Pine Tree State has a real journey for their pastime this week.

Holy Cross is scheduled to play St. John's of Brooklyn and the Crusaders should have little trouble coming through with another victory, as the Brooklyn college went down before the weak Lehigh team.

Mal Frank Cavanaugh's Fordham boys opened the season auspiciously with a win over St. Bonaventure, which team is coached by Fred Ostergren, the former star Holy Cross line man.

CAVY'S TEAM IS GOOD

Cavy is looking forward to a good season and will be out for revenge on Saturday when he sends his Maroon club against George Washington, which took the major's outfit into camp last year.

The talent of the Navy by Davis-Elkins was not wholly unlooked for as the Southerners have a far stronger aggregation than is generally known in this vicinity.

But the narrow escape of Notre Dame was a real surprise and boosted the stock of Loyola materially, for the New Orleans college must have a real football team to be able to toss such a scare into Knute Rockne and his irate Irish.

Flock of Eagles to Go to Annapolis

"Sink the Navy."

Boston College is cluttered up with these signs as Joe McKenney's eleven prepares to battle with the Middies this week-end.

Three different tours have been arranged for B. C. students who want to see the Eagles and the Navy meet for the first time on the gridiron.

Three hundred students are expected to make the trip.

OFF FOR GAIN ON NEW McKENNEY FORMATION START

WESTON COVERS GROUND FASTER THAN EVER FOR EAGLES

Left, diagram of new formation from which McKenney has most plays start. Guard on opposite side of center from which play is to go drops back and cuts around and through. Tackle goes through after a back, as Herman is doing, and an offensive half takes care of the defensive tackle. Another half gets the defensive end, while remaining back gallops along to protect further on. The formation is a new one devised by Coach Joe McKenney.

HAGEN SHOOTS 73 FOR FIRST 18 HOLES

Five Farms Course, Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP)—Walter Hagen turned in a 73 three strokes over par for the first 18 holes of today's 36-hole qualifying round of the National Professional Golfers' Association championship tournament, in which he is defending his title.

Hagen needs a par 36 on the first nine but took a seven on the par four tenth. Except for this one bad hole he played par golf despite the shiftiness of the course, coming in in 38.

With nearly all the 18-hole scores in, Hagen's 73 led all the rest with the exception of that of George Christ of Rochester, N. Y., who also had a 73. The course, recently lengthened and toughened, was proving a problem even for this great field of the country's leading pros.

Hagen's card (first nine):

Par out ..... 4 4 4 3 5 4 4 5 4—37
Hagen out .. 4 4 4 3 4 5 4 5 5—38

Hagen's card for the second nine:

ROTHROCK HAS PLAYED EVERY POSITION ON NINE

Cleveland, O., Oct. 1 (AP)—Jack Rothrock, versatility utility man of the Boston Red Sox, started yesterday's game with Cleveland in the catcher's box, thereby reaching the limit of possibilities for varied service to his team. He has now played every position on the field. Rothrock caught only one-third of a inning, requiring to let field as soon as the lead-off man had been retired. Last Monday he played three positions in one game against Detroit, spending the last inning in the pitchers' box, where he allowed no hits and no passes.

Eagles Know Game; May Be Great Club

By JOE CASHMAN

Joe McKenney, new Boston College coach, may be the youngest football mentor in the country, but there is nothing unsophisticated about his initial gridiron product.

That's the impression one carried away after watching the Eagles score a 38-to-6 win over Catholic University in their opening game.

It is virtually impossible to estimate the strength of the Maroon and Gold outfit on what it showed because it was never compelled to open up, but it proved conclusively that it is well versed in the fundamentals of the game.

That goes not only for the varsity but for the scrubs as well. Every player on the squad, which numbers over forty, saw action at one time or other during the battle, and each showed a surprising knowledge of the rudiments of the pastime.

Such knowledge being the foundation of greatness in every branch of sport, it can be said that McKenney has started well.

It can also be said that the young man is going to succeed or fail on his own merit.

His team resembles those of Cavanaugh and Daley in that it knows the fundamentals of the game, but there the resemblance ends.

ELEVEN IS UNIQUE

In almost every other respect. It is unlike all Heights' outfits of the past.

Its formations are different. Its offense is different. Its defense is different. Its conduct is different. Even its uniform is different.

In the opening game, at least, the team used nothing but a straight, old fashioned offense, but ran off all plays from a formation never before used by an Eagle eleven. This formation is shown in the above diagram.

On the defense six men played on the line with the center doing the roving act. The guards played low but the other forwards assumed a semi-standing position for the most part, which is something new for an Eagle eleven.

The team employs the huddl. but with a unique formation. Instead of grouping around in a circle like most elevens, the Eagles employ an oblong formation with five linemen, backs to the line of scrimmage, facing the four backs and the wings fillers in the ends.

After the signals have been given the backs do the necessary shifting behind the screen formed by the forwards.

Not until the Eagles meet the Navy next Saturday will it be possible to get a real line on the worth of these innovations.

If the first-stringers are able to play most of the game, B. C. should do very well, indeed, for each of the eleven varsity players has plenty of class.

B. C. HAS GREAT LINE

The ends, Murphy and Dixon, are very good, and the tackles, Capt McGuirk and Herman, are even better. Sheehan and Morelli, the guards, appear able to hold their own against any opposition, and Anderson, the center, while only a youngster, looked very good in his first game.

The line, on the whole, is strong both offensively and defensively and tackles, blocks, interferes and covers well.

Al Weston and Paddy Creedon the backfield aces, were rated among the best ball carriers in the country last season and looked better last Saturday than ever before. With such a strong line to help them, both ought to be deserving of "All" honors at the close of the campaign.

The other backs, Marr and Smith, are also capable performers. The former is rated as one of the best punters in college ranks. He didn't do any booting against C. U., because the Eagles didn't kick once during the game, but from all reports, he has few superiors.

Here Is Real Proof That Gene Knows His Shakespeare

New York, Oct. 1 (AP)—A story indicating that Gene Tunney certainly knows his Shakespeare was told today by Dr. William Phelps, professor of English, Yale University, who returned on the Minnewaska after a European vacation. Dr. Phelps was sponsor of Tunney's lecture on the Bard of Avon at Yale several months ago.

"At the luncheon I gave prior to his Yale talk," the professor said, "an American novelist was present—and commented upon a prize fight in the play 'As You Like It.' Gene corrected him quietly, saying: 'It was not a prize fight, but a wrestling match.'"

BURNS, PRIOR READY TO PLAY FOR HARVARD

By Paul [illegible]

[illegible] is among [illegible] the juries and the first game of the season [illegible] hope penetrated from a gloomy Harvard sky this morning with the release of Ken Burns and Jimmie Prior to the football fold.

With Burns and Prior still on the injury shelf, Harvard was placed in a precarious situation as far as its end department went. End Coach Eddie Bradford was forced to use a second team player Frank Pickard, and Dick O'Connell, converted from a guard, as the starting ends against Springfield on Saturday.

Wing replacements were tough and Pickard and O'Connell were forced with the task of playing the whole game against Springfield.

The return of O'Connell and Burns today helped matters considerably and despite the fact that neither will start, both will be used against the Y. M. C. A. College.

Bradford figures that it is foolish to break up a perfectly good wing combination because of the return of two veterans, who have played little hard football this fall.

Both veterans will be ready for Saturday, as Head Coach Horween will give them plenty of work in the two scrimmages this week, the first coming this afternoon. Prior is as sound as rock while Burns still has his injured shoulder in wraps.

Should Springfield prove stronger than expected on Saturday, Burns may be called on to play a very important role. Burns is the best punter at Harvard this year. He can boast that eval consistently on an average of 38 yards, just 10 yards better than the average of French's punts.

STOLEN LOVE

Will Any Man Love Girl With a Past?

CHAPTER 13.

"Well, let's start," Anna said, snuggling into the auto salesman's squirrel coat, and adjusting the bond broker's wrist watch over her glove.

Marguerite Sanderson wouldn't come with them; she wanted to go out to the hospital and see her husband instead.

"Pity she wouldn't send him out to the Veterans' Hospital at Livermore or Palo Alto or somewhere," Hogan sniffed. "Then she wouldn't have to be nursing to see him every night, and it would be better for him anyway. This town is no place for a man with T. B——"

"But he isn't going to get better, so what's the diff?" inquired practical Maudie.

"Well, Murphy! About $200 a month difference! Why sacrifice yourself for a man that is going to die anyway? Pretty soon all she'd have for her trouble will be a lot of gray hairs and a tombstone——"

Maudie Murphy chuckled. "Most of us never have a tombstone for a souvenir!" She patted her bossy girl's tenderly. "All I ever had was the gray hairs to remember my true love by——"

They all laughed at that, all but Joan. She didn't laugh. Like Maudie, she had nothing to mourn, nothing to remember her love by. Not even a photograph or a letter. . .

"The regular dinner?" a waiter was asking. They were at the little Italian restaurant already, and Joan's thoughts so far away. . . .

"Regular nothing!" Maudie boomed. "What do you take us for, bucks? Just because five lone women——"

"Oh, go on and order and don't talk so much!" Hogan cut in. Several diners were turning to look at them, Maudie talked so loud. The orchestra struck up. Two or three couples rose and began to dance in the center of the room.

Someone was waving at Anna, a little man with short-cropped glasses and a bald head. "Call him over here—he's got two others with him!" Aline whispered, but Anna wouldn't. She glided over to his table, smiling vaguely.

"This is the last time I go anywhere with her!" Hogan snorted. "The same thing every time. I'm sick of it. Do you think she'd introduce him? No—not her. That was Arlin Savenski, the tobacco man. Worth a mint. The selfish cat!"

Maude and Aline melted away while Hogan was talking. They were inviting, too, Hogan's hatchet face under her garish purple hat was red and angry. And then a young boy came and stood beside them.

"Dancing?" he asked smiling.

Joan looked down—oh, how yesterday terribly embarrassed. When she looked up again Hogan had gone away with him. She was laughing up at him as she danced.

After a long time Hogan came back with the boy. They sat with their heads close together, and talked in whispers. Hours passed, surely it was midnight! But when the waiter brought the check and Joan paid it and slipped out of the door it was only half past eight!

Next day even Maudie was cool. "Gave us the slip, eh? Well, it's your affair, but you're not much of a sport, Hastings!"

Joan's attempt to fraternize with "the girls" was a total failure.

"Discouraged?" Francine asked

EXCISE TAX LAW UPHELD BY STATE SUPREME COURT

The Massachusetts excise tax law as administered by the department of corporations and taxation was upheld today in a decision by the full bench of the Supreme Court, which dismissed a suit brought by the Macallen Company of Boston to recover $8,814.28 paid as excise tax in 1928.

The company contended that in computing the tax the commissioner had included interest on tax-exempt bonds. The court ruled that the tax commissioner properly included this income when assessing the tax on corporate excess.

FOLLIES GIRL BRIDE OF N.Y. PUBLISHER

Spurning the advances of the British heir apparent, Doris George, Cambridge girl who won the Boston Evening American beauty contest in 1923, has met her American prince charming and is content to settle down to prosaic married life

Just a few years ago, Doris, and her charming sister, Phyllis, were especially invited to be the dancing partners of Edward, Prince of Wales, in Montreal. They refused!

Then Flo Ziegfeld, glorifier of American girlhood, gave Doris her big chance in the Follies. She made good.

But she happened to make her home in the Belvidere Hotel, New York city. There she met Paul Allen Hale, distinguished son of the managing director of the hotel, Curtis A. Hale.

Of course, it was love at first sight. Paul is a distinguished member of the Broderick Publishing Company of that city, and as such is rated near high in social and financial circles.

Then the inevitable. The wedding took place right in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. It was a quiet affair, and Mr. Hale stated that he could not participate in make their home in the Belvidere Hotel.

"Will your wife ever return to the stage?" he was asked.

Women for Hoover on 'Dry Stand,' Says Mrs. Rinehart

New York, Oct. 1 (AP)—The women national committee for Hoover announced that Mrs. Mary S. Roberts Rinehart, novelist, in a statement endorsing Herbert Hoover's record as a humanitarian, said most of the women of the country are going to vote for Hoover because of his stand on prohibition.

"To uncounted numbers of them," the statement said, Hoover's rally call for food conservation represented their sole chance to participate in the war. His stand on prohibition appeals to them, for the majority of the women of this country are dry and intend to remain so."

RADIO INDUSTRY IS APPROACHING BILL ON DOLLAR CLASS

IS TRIPLED IN THREE YEARS

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

Twenty years ago, which isn't so very long when you look back upon it, first-class liners slipped their moorings at Boston or New York and sailed forth to Northern Europe or to the Mediterranean, bearing in their saloon decks the cream of America's society and in their steerage sturdy foster-children returning for a glimpse of their native heaths by way of holiday.

By the time the first mess-call was sounded, the ship was out of touch with land. Henceforth, for seven or nine or fourteen days, that human cargo knew naught of the world, and the world knew naught of them, save for an unlikely mid-ocean meeting with another lonesome and detached craft.

One thought little of the awesome isolation in those days. It was part of the sea adventure. One felt things. Strange, undefined wonderings. Spasms of utter helplessness. But one did not feel any lack, for the thing which was lacking was unknown, unimagined.

Then came wireless. At first installed on Ritzy boats rather hilariously and quite frankly for advertising purposes. A lure to the timid, but suddenly the world was electrified. The great liners Florida and Republic met with terrific impact. The Florida sank and all the hundreds on board would have drowned at sea but for the new marvel, wireless. Instead of thousandfold disaster, all were saved. This was in 1909.

Out of that simple arrangement of coil and spark-gap there has come into existence in the past 19 years an organism far more potent in the annihilation of distance than the steam train, the motor car or the air craft. There has arisen a giant force which brings to the humblest citizen in the most distant reaches of the earth riches of civilization far beyond the dreams of a Medici. A true renaissance is at hand, when we have at our fingers' ends an instrument that will bring to us the deliberations of the League of Nations, the best thoughts of our chosen leaders, the outpoured wealth of musical and dramatic genius.

Wireless has become radio. By its means we may converse privately with friend or business colleague in London or Paris or Berlin. With a modest-priced mechanism we "tap the riches of five hundred studios which exist only for our entertainment. With another simple apparatus we listen to the nimble amateur "working" Australia or Sweden or South Africa. With a tube, a slotted disk and a motor we garner living pictures out of the air.

A plaything? Yes. But what a plaything! A toy which has produced broadcasting studios valued at more than $15,000,000 in the United States. A toy which supports a manufacturing industry with an annual output of half a billion dollars a year by factories valued at a hundred or more millions of dollars. A toy which amuses the nation and the world with the golden talents of artists mounting to ten figures the amount of twenty-five million dollars a year. A plaything of such potency as to tempt great advertisers to prepare to spend two hundred million dollars during the coming year for its use.

NEW A-K SET FOR DWELLERS IN CITY

A new, all-electric receiver, designed for use in downtown districts which have direct current, is being shown by the Atwater-Kent Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia. It is known as Model 41 and in performance and looks it is the twin of the Model 40, which is the leading A. C. set put out by the same factory. It has the same simplicity and completeness and is said to produce the same results as to range, selectivity and tone.

The new D. C. set, for use with 110-120 volt, direct current, comprises two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification in conjunction with the Atwater-Kent coupling circuit, a detector, one stage of audio frequency amplification and one stage of double audio frequency amplification. It uses five D. C. tubes and two power tubes.

Model 41 is a compact, efficient, six-tube receiver, entirely self-contained and with but one dial for station selection. Model 41 is equipped with a voltage control or regulator, which automatically governs the amount of power input, and is intended especially for use in localities where there is a direct current. Model 41 is a powerful, sensitive set, similar in general appearance to the Model 42, and is equipped with the volume control.

Featured with these new model sets are three speakers, Model E-2 and E-3. They are all of the dynamic type. The largest (Model E) and the medium size (Model E-2) have the freestyle cone. The smallest (Model E-3) has the bell-edge cone.

U. S. TO ACCEPT NO NAVAL PACT COMPROMISE

By WILLIAM E. FLYTHE

Washington, Oct. 1—The United States will accept no compromise with the British and French on their secret naval alliance, it is said in official circles today.

The rejection by this government of their proposal to fix an impossible or unacceptable limit on cruisers and submarines will remain the policy of the American government, it was stated.

This was learned in quarters close to the President and Secretary of State following publication of dispatches from Paris that Aristide Briland, premier of that country and one of the master minds in the Washington armaments conference of 1921-2 was to be called upon to endeavor to untangle the snarl arising from the secret alliance.

Briland, it was learned, is to propose that his country be allowed to fix an unlimited number of a nation and Great Britain. He would suggest, it was learned, that the two great sea powers coherent to fix a limit on global or total tonnage leaving those nations free to construct the type of ship they desire within this tonnage.

It was pointed out that the United States is not interested in the discussion as it now stands. The British, it was stated, would seek to have the makers of the world's first cruisers, and the right to place six inch guns on all of their cargo or merchant vessels.

The United States, it was declared, will consider any concession or suggestion as one designed to delay the completion of the United States program to build 23 modern cruisers, eight of which are now under construction, and 15 to be authorized at the next session of Congress.

Officials now declare they can see no chance for effective disarmament, that as always the United States will meet any sincere move in this direction, but that this government must round out its navy with suitable warships.

Senator Swanson Raps Naval Pact

Washington, Oct. 1 — Senator Claude Swanson of Virginia, ranking Democrat on the Senate naval affairs committee, brands the Franco-British agreement as a scheme to insure British naval supremacy at the expense of the American navy, in a statement to Universal Service. He said:

"Because of my activities in the presidential campaign, I am not thoroughly acquainted with all the details of the situation. I am in favor of a fair, just system of disarmament, which would provide for equality as contained in the Washington conference, but I am opposed to any scheme which would give Great Britain or any other power an advantage over the United States and would rudely nullify such an agreement.

"The Washington conference treaty provided for a ratio between the United States, Great Britain and Japan of 5-5-3. This should be carried out in spirit, and there should be no thought of advantage to any power, by having certain classes of ships permitted, which would give it superiority.

"The plan as outlined, it seems to me, would give Great Britan great advantage, as it would enable her in time of war to arm her merchant marine, which is greatly superior to ours, and also by limiting the size of our cruisers which gives her a marked advantage as she has naval bases all over the world, which we do not possess.

"Great Britian would be enabled under the plan proposed to wage offensive warfare anywhere while we would be limited entirely to defensive warfare. I am unwilling to consent to an agreement which would give Great Britian this advantage."

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

THOUSANDS AT SHOW

EAGER TO SEE NEW MODELS

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

Scores of workmen, executives, salesmen and officials of high and low degree spent a hectic Sunday and a fevered forenoon today putting finishing touches upon 200 exhibits, which make up the eighth and greatest annual radio show which has opened its doors to the people of New England.

Just as New England gave first and greatest encouragement to the budding science, so did Sheldon H. Fairbanks, eight years ago, glimpse somewhat the bold which this new century wonder would have upon the imaginations of all. Year by year the radio shows have grown in importance as the art has grown in technical perfection. This year's show is no mere matter of displaying prettier designs than last year, nor camouflaging old-type apparatus in new shapes. This year's show brings to the citizen a year of vast accomplishment. In all the ten years which have seen the most rapid growth of radio, there has not been a span of twelve months which has brought forth such fundamental advancements as has just gone by.

For long it has been known that radio transmission was far superior to reception. The ordinary receiver was incapable of reproducing tone quality such as issued from broadcast antennas. Now that is all changed. New precision, new standards, new designs of receiving circuits, speakers, tubes, new filters, new power applications. It is all there at Mechanics Building, in booth after booth, 206 and more in number.

The general aspect of the Radio Show is one of beauty. Trellised booths are separated by pillars. Gorgeous drapings of velvet, yellow, blue, maroon, crimson, gold. Cabinets of rich woods, set off against lordly backgrounds, with soft carpets of the East underfoot.

On the stage in the great hall stands a tall structure, open at the front. Rather, not open, but glassed in, with double plate glass. A broadcasting studio where routine and special programs from the several Boston stations will carry on as though in their home stations.

Off to the side is a great hall devoted to aircraft. Great Stinson Detroiters and Travelairs; chummy Monocoupes, and many others seen close at hand instead of mile-high in air. Up in the balcony an intriguing display of airplane models, surprisingly faithful, amazingly light. Only four ounces, yet they will fly a tenth of a mile or more.

All through the six secular days of the week the show will hold forth with action aplenty. Judging from the waiting crowd, attendance figures of previous years will be thrown to the winds. America is radio minded and is fast becoming air-minded. Here's what's doing today:

1 00 p. m.—Doors open to public.
2:30-2 30 p. m.—Television demonstration, Grand Hall stage.
4 00-4 00 p. m. Neapolitan Dutch Girls, Crystal Studio, WEEI.

MAKES TUNING IN EASY

This newest Philco Lowboy of Louis XVI design has a drop door which make an arm rest for easy tuning.

With requests for information as to details on the new Philco all-electric sets coming in from as far removed places as Rome and Tokio and orders increasing throughout the United States, production of these sets by the Philadelphia Storage Battery Co. has been speeded in the last few weeks.

The daily output will soon reach 2000 sets and speakers, officials of the company announce. Receiving sets now available follow the latest trends in modern furniture and are as follows: Spanish Brown, Labrador Gray, Mandarin Red, Nile Green. In addition the company is offering a handsome de luxe electric phonograph radio, in a highboy and a lowboy style, both combining the speaker and the set in attractive cabinets and a console grand speaker on which the colored sets can be placed.

One of the most interesting radio fan letters to the Philco Company has arrived from Augusto Salvadori of Rome. "Due to the great favor which the new Philco set has encountered," writes Salvadori, "I am writing for all possible information on it." In Rome the radio is known as the "radiotelephonia."

Following a nation-wide trip by salesmen for the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, the needs of the trade have been analyzed and every possible effort is being made by the company to expedite shipments and to have this product well known in the radio field as the fall business increases.

Among other features contained in the new Philco radio are the following: It is powered by four 226 tubes, one 227 tube, one 171 tube and one 280 rectifier tube; it is tuned for reception through the entire broadcast band from 540 to 1500 kilocycles, carrying all low wave length stations in this range, also; it is provided with four large condensers

EVERY day the American publishes two thrilling and interesting stories by authors of recognized standing. Here you can find the latest serial fiction published in generous installments each day.

Martha Lee's School Open Tomorrow

YOUR cooking school is ready!

Martha Lee announces that all details have been completed for the opening of her annual Free Cooking School to be offered to the women of New England under the auspices of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser at the Hotel Statler Ballroom beginning at 2 o'clock tomorrow.

Martha Lee will present Mrs. Lilla Pauline Cross to the audience at the beginning of the first class. We are certain her remarks will be the starting point of one of the most successful functions in the interests of our womenfolk it has been our privilege to sponsor for a long time.

In one of our recent little chats, Mrs. Cross repaid us for all our effort by her expressions of delight over the enthusiastic interest of New England women, and over the warm reception that awaits her appearance on the platform.

And such a stage setting! We are not going to spoil your anticipation by telling you all about it. We know you have been looking forward to this real treat. We know of bridge parties that have been postponed and social functions cancelled just so this week with all its surprises could be held in reserve for these lectures.

But one thing about the stage picture that impresses us is this, a perfectly delightful home atmosphere is not dependent upon elaborate or luxurious appointments.

Thousands upon thousands of women have been inspired to renewed interest in housekeeping perplexities by the knowledge and broad experience of this noted teacher. She pulls at your heart strings with a host of little ideas and time-saving methods garnished with delightful humor to make your tasks easier.

Mrs. Cross, too, has had long experience as a housekeeper herself, and as a teacher and lecturer before women's organizations, schools and colleges.

In commenting today on the scope of her talks, Mrs. Cross said:

"Many women used to feel that old ways of doing things were good enough for their mothers, and therefore good enough for them. The progressive housewife today knows methods have changed in the home as in the business world.

"She remembers when grandmother baked bread by a long, slow process because that was the only way known, and because there were no good public bakeries. A large part of the day used to be spent in the kitchen because equipment was slow and tools clumsy and efficient methods not emphasized.

"A few well chosen, simple, modern devices, and the better quality and greater variety of food products on the market have greatly reduced the routine and drudgery of the kitchen. But, every woman must be reminded occasionally of what is good and how to choose it from the bad. In order to keep housekeeping abreast of American progress."

That is the purpose of the Cooking School, and that is why any woman interested in making her work run more smoothly will be greatly aided by these classes.

Blanks will be provided at the hall for question purposes, and will be collected by the ushers and passed to the platform.

A number of women are going to be made very happy each day in securing the handsome gifts donated for the success of the school by Boston merchants. These gifts will be displayed and will be explained by Mrs. Cross from the stage.

All these donations are really fine additions to the beauty, comfort and efficiency of any home. Of course, in addition to these major gifts, there will be distributed each afternoon a half dozen market baskets filled with choice foods, and the various dishes prepared by Mrs. Cross at each class also will be given away.

Be sure to bring your pencil and notebook, for you are going to have many occasions to jot down pointers at the talks. Come early and enjoy the musical program that has been provided for this hour between 1 and 2 o'clock. The classes will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons, with a final session Friday evening at 7:30.

The Martha Lee Kitchen at 5 Winthrop sq. will be closed for this week only. Save your Statler programs and bring them to the next regular class and receive credit for your attendance.

Fabrics for Winter

Leiong chose black crepe satin for this entirely new afternoon frock of his. It has a tight hip yoke and two circular flares that form a deep point in the back, giving a line for afternoon that will be smart this year. Vionnet trims another frock of hers with hemstitching; it is beige crepe with a scarf descending in the back and very interesting sleeves. Jenny designed the afternoon gown of the right and reverse sides of black satin.

Barrie's Talk Sparkles in Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, Oct. 1—Sir James Barrie's whimsical dialogue in "Half an Hour" is to be incorporated in a one per cent sound picture by Famous Players-Lasky. With the circumstance of "Peter Pan" and "The Admirable Crichton," both Barrie plays, Jesse L. Lasky has good reasoning for "Half an Hour."

For the last six weeks I suppose it is very natural with a trained dramatist of William Le Baron's experience and ability in the Paramount family that he should be given the picture. He is preparing the continuity and will also direct it. Prior to Mr. Le Baron's five months you will find an enthusiast at work upon it. He believes in talkies and has an argument to refute every objection to film.

It seems particularly fitting that Ruth Chatterton should be starred in a Barrie play. Her "Marie Rose" is one of the finest things ever produced in America. It stands out as her best play and as a stage production that has seldom been duplicated in this country. She will have the leading feminine role in "Half an Hour." So far this is all the cast selected. It eliminates Ruth Chatterton from the prospect of making "Drums of Oude," the play originally chosen for her.

Alma Rubens has put a premium on a certain type of underwear. In "Show Boat" she plays quite a bit with one per cent negro blood. Now she has been chosen by Henry King for an Oriental dancer singer in "She Goes to War," two diversified roles, but both of them suited to Miss Rubens' exotic beauty.

My hero, a Holmes instinct tells me that ere many days Richard Arlen will be punching the time clock at United Artists Studio. Richard has made his test after test for Mary Pickford's picture, "Coquette." Although they are mum as the well-known sphinx on that lot I happen to know that if Mr. Arlen does put his signature to the contract he will do it any day now. He will play the shell-shocked soldier in love with Coquette.

The Columbia studios are feeling jubilant over a contract which Jack Cohn has just negotiated, or, perhaps, Joe Brandt, in New York did the negotiating, but it doesn't matter. The fact is that this is the first independent to sign a contract with Western Electric for the use of inventions and vitaphone in their sound pictures. Ground will be broken almost immediately for a sound studio and probably by the time Harry Cohn returns to Hollywood he will find Columbia specials a la sound. While calling at the studio the other day I happened to see Don Alvarado walking in the door. He had just signed a contract to play the lead in "The Apache," opposite Margaret Livingston. Say what you will, this company seems to be moving along right smart.

The joys of stage success and the applause of Broadway aren't helping Estelle Taylor forget Hollywood and her home here. She has promised Jack Dempsey to remain with the company until it closes in Boston, toward the last of October, and then she will trek westward to the land of motion pictures. Estelle hasn't been forgetting pictures by any means. While she has been playing for David Belasco in "The Big Fight" she has tested her voice in a short reeler which she made for Monta Bell at the Paramount studios.

Edna Murphy is a fixture at Warners'. She goes from one picture to the other, scarcely stopping to catch her breath. She must be meeting with the approval of all concerned or else they wouldn't be handing her out so many contracts. Edna is running a close race with her husband, Mervyn Le Roy, in the matter of jobs. Mervyn is kept busy directing at First National.

Now that Warners have purchased First National, Edna can do a little crowing over her better half. Her next is "Kid Gloves."

A PRETTY FROCK FOR SLENDER FIGURES

6245. Delightfully cool and youthful is this pleasing model. It may be developed with or without the wrist-length sleeves, and the collar. The bloused waist is mounted on an underbody which may be of lining. The right front is crossed over the left front in the popular diagonal closing. The skirt shows gathered fulness over the center. Dotted silk in blue and white or red and white with pipings in a matched shade of crepe de chine is here pictured. This style is also good for printed georgette, chiffon or voile. Canton crepe or satin may also be used.

Correct Manners

MRS CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Please tell me exactly when it is correct to serve bread and butter plates. I have heard so much discussion lately as to their appropriateness. A. E. D.

BREAD and butter plates are usually placed at breakfast and luncheon, since butter is served at breakfast and luncheon. They are used, too, at informal or family dinners. And, indeed, they are most convenient, not only to serve butter on, but to place the bread on, and the radishes or celery or any other detail of this kind that is served.

Of course, at the most formal of dinners bread and butter plates are not placed, but there are comparatively few of such formal dinners. The reason why they are not placed is that no butter is served at a formal dinner.

However, except at these most formal of dinners, I observe increasingly that bread and butter plates are being placed at dinner. And I, for one, am glad, for it is a relief to have a harbor for one's bread and radishes and celery and nuts. Usually, too, bread and butter plates are of an interesting pattern to combine with or match the dinner plates, and so they add another touch of loveliness.

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN:

My sweetheart and I, while walking, met a very dear friend of his, one whom we both know very well. This friend had another man with him whom we did not know. In presenting us to this man, who should be the first one introduced, my sweetheart or myself? CELIA.

THE new acquaintance should first be presented to you, since as a woman, you would be given that honor.

TO see it is to talk about it. Seldom has the screen brought a drama that sends the world over of its theatres so stirred. Eye-filling. Soul-stirring.

THIS brilliant pageant of modern society passes before one's eyes—the gayety, the abandon, provocative dilettantes and their handsome partners in the whirl of life.

THEY taste of its thrills madly, heedlessly. The music of the Jazz Age is in their blood. The battle of the sexes, in which all is fair, enthralls them!

HERE truly is a picture that excites and absorbs. Gorgeous in its panorama of passion, tender in its moonlit romance, a love symphony of young hearts. The party begins. Combi Joint

This Day in History

HENRY III of England was born on October 1, 1207. As he was but nine years old when he succeeded to the throne, England was for many years ruled by a regent, William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke. In 1227 the king was declared of age.

Story of Modern Marriages and Husband Hunters

CHAPTER 30

Once again the yacht club was trimmed with bright streamers and gaily fluttering pennants as on the night of the ball Benny Black first attended there. Only now there were no balloons popping up and down against the ceiling, and their colorful buoyancy was missing from his own spirit, he reflected, as he edged into the ballroom and sat down moodily in a far corner.

It was too early for the guests. In his haste to get out of the apartment he had rushed over ahead of his hostess, forgetting that he had had no dinner.

He watched the orchestra file in and settle about the box at the side of the mezzanine, he saw Beatrice pass through the corridor—a tall, handsome woman, faultlessly gowned, the figure of a successful young matron, excepting for the lacking sadness in her eyes.

The silence was broken by sounds from the orchestra, the tumult of arriving parties. And presently the place was filled by groups which formed and dissolved, laughing, calling to each other, all awaiting the guest of honor.

And there she was, poised in the doorway, a slim girl in white, flashing her smile, waving both hands and throwing kisses.

The orchestra crashed into the rushing, joyous air of her dance; a circle formed. Diana could do nothing but swirl into the mad rhythm. Head back, little feet flying, every movement a line of grace, Benny thought of the statuette—thought that this girl was quite as fascinating, quite as certainly the embodiment of beauty as that jewel of art.

She glanced here and there as she performed, laughing with delight. And suddenly her eyes met Benny's, watching so intently from his corner. Amusement swept the smile from her face; she missed a step—recovered quickly—brought the dance to an end. Nor would she give an encore, leading the crowd down the room to a table piled with gifts all bearing hearty wishes for "bon voyage."

Beatrice discovered him then. He had a feeling that Diana had spoken to her hostess, disclosing his presence—and she came to greet him with charming and sincere delight, slipping her hand through his arm as she bore him back in the crowd.

"Hey, Benny!" Look, who's here!" "Where you been keeping yourself?" Such was the welcome he received. All friendly, more than cordial. No one asked for Ann; he thought of this, and a stinging sense of shame crept through him. They despised Ann—his wife. And, he had to admit, with reason. She had abused their confidence, used them as she saw fit. . . . No sense of honor anywhere in her acquisitive little body.

Diana Was Surrounded and He Didn't Try to Reach Her

Diana was surrounded, and he made no effort to reach her. Just to see her was enough; more, he kept telling himself than such a fool as he had been deserved. Then someone handed him a wineglass. They were toasting the girl whom they all loved.

He drank with the others, allowed his glass to be filled again and again, as new toasts were proposed. And now Diana was about to offer her own. Glass held high, her look met his for an instant as she said clearly: "To our lost loves!" An instant of silence; then someone laughed, and they all drank while the chatter began again, higher, merrier than before.

When the dancing started, Benny moved to the mezzanine, sat in a shadow there, unwilling to leave even though he himself apart, outside of all this good-will. And so saw Diana searching the crowd, moving the gray eyes restlessly, picking him out at last. She seemed not to know he was present after that, romping through the evening, the center of color and movement and noise.

Eventually he got up, stepped through a casement to a little balcony, which evening a dim part of the drive, sat there with his hand against his head.

It was then he came to know the depth of his wife's deceit, for it was in the darkness beneath this balcony that Ann and Freddie separated for the last time—though neither of them was aware that it was to be their final parting.

They had whirled through a crazy three hours together, Ann reckless, bent upon making him promise to marry her the moment she obtained her divorce—a thing he was determined not to do.

"Mother's gone, Freddie. Nothing to stop us now. Watch your li' Annikins."

"Forgot that stuff. I told you I'm not marrying anybody, didn't I? You're crazy."

"Crazy about you, darling."

"Aw"

They went to a notorious inn, where Ann drank with enthusiasm, not aware of the boy's restraint. For the first time since he had known her he was bored by Ann, annoyed by her rash disregard for the world they lived in, fed up on her clinging.

Of course, he had something on his mind—his sister's party at the Polo Club. He wished to attend this, and the twining, half-drunken girl was keeping him from it, which made him angry. He felt no responsibility for her; she had made all the advances, trimmed her own course, since her marriage, and what happened to her was no concern of his.

He had been a pleasant little paymate, but now he was tired of paying.

From the Inn They Went to Another Roadhouse

He could not get away from her, however. From the inn they went to another roadhouse and it was 11 o'clock when he rose abruptly and said he was driving on. She followed, perforce, settled herself in the taxi he had kept waiting.

"Going along, Freddie-kins. Wouldn't leave li' Ann, would you? Course not. Going marry li' Ann"—

"She's just mine. And you won't come along. Hea's giving a party for Diana, and you're in no condition to show up there. Take me home first and then jog. Be a good girl now and don't start any rumpus."

But she was stubborn, and in the end he allowed the cab to put him out in the street outside the club, letting it to Ann's home and sweather reaching arms.

He made his way toward the building, all ablaze with lights, and for a moment under the balcony upon which Benny had established himself. Freddie did not see that Ann dismissed the cab the moment his back was turned, his growl of surprise when she turned, resting along the drive, brutal with anger.

"Thought I sent you home!" He did but "cook," said other cabs, but the man on the balcony made no move. . . . Oddly enough, he felt no impulse to go to the aid of his wife; she seemed no longer to belong to him. Furthermore, he was held as by iron bands; astonishment, disgust, fury, each held a separate weight upon him, and he could neither stir nor call to the two who quarreled beneath his feet.

Ann was crying in a maudlin way. "Don't' him love him Annikins, um old Freddie-boy? Course he does! Going marry um Annikins soon's she divorced bad old husband; pay um bills for Annikins. Loves her Freddie-boy—"

"Shut up, for the love of Mike! Here—Freddie called a standing cab and practically lifted the girl into it. 'You go home and stay there—and try to sober up before that poor goof gets in. And cut out the divorce talk—I wouldn't marry you on a bet—you hear? Get that, now, and keep quiet!"

The cab drove away. Freddie went around to the front entrance. Benny sank back, sick with shame . . . And when the cab began to roll down the street Ann leaned forward, ordered the driver to stop.

Love—The Magician

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

WHEN a man's in love, there is no one, there simply could never be any one else, half as wonderful as beautiful as his Beloved. Helen of Troy, Cleopatra—all the sirens of the world put together, couldn't hold a candle to HIS love!

"Just wait until you meet her! She's the most beautiful thing in the world! And her disposition! She's simply an angel." Haven't you heard your brother, or one of his pals, rave this way? And then came the meeting! You had a hazy idea of what HE would be like—something between a saint and an angel, with a halo gracing her loveliness, and of such dazzling beauty that you were scared half to death. BUT nine times out of ten she was a very sweet, colorless little thing—just an ordinary sort of a girl, with not half the beauty of some of the other girls with whom you know he had been going around.

But Love is the greatest magician in the world. He waves his magic wand, and presto! Where before there was nothing but plain everyday sense, and sanity with the eyes of Love the beloved is vested with all the virtues and beauties of the world put together.

And who can deny that Love really is blind? For if it were nothing but the dreariness and sadness of things we'd never know how happy we know the ecstasy of living and loving. So don't cry when one of your nose jobs starts to cave. Some day some one will love you for that little bump at least. Only an artist can see beauty where none exists, and Love is the master artist of all times.

the next morning, finding her left out of the chattering group in the coatroom.

"Yes!" Joan burst out suddenly. She had been gathering courage for this all day. "Francine, I wasn't made to model dresses. It isn't enough. Maybe I could have done it, if I had something—someone you know—something big to think about between times. But I haven't. I'm going to leave, Francine, and—"

"Leave."

"Yes—oh not because of the girls—just because of myself—that's all. I just saw, all of a sudden—that I could—if I tried real hard—do something with my life—"

"But what do you want to do?" Francine was asking for the third time. "Oh, Josh, you little idiot, don't give it all up! You've got a sense of color and line. You'll make a saleswoman—a real one—like me. I'll teach you the business—you'll just model for special customers—I'll make something of you—"

"That's just what I do want! I want to learn—everything—study—I thought I'd go to night school, there's a designing course—"

"All right," Francine said. "All right."

But when she saw Anne, regal in the wedding gown she had been wont to wear, when she knew that even that make-believe was over, a lump rose in her throat she gasped her way back to a fitting room and cried. Cried because she was the end—the end of her mourning for Bill.

Maisie didn't understand all the studying. Never a night but what Joan had her nose in a book. She was always fussing with water colors or sketching little figures with very small heads and very long legs.

But Joan did seem a different girl. Her color was coming back and her merriment in story. It helped in clearing the region of the lower Dnieper of the Mongols. A while later Lithuania won an important victory over the Knights of the Teutonic Order.

So much for her early history. Today Lithuania is one of the important republics of the Baltican states. Although for many years under the yoke of foreign nations, the people of this valiant little nation have retained their individuality. And having been utterly overrun by the Germans during the World War, their homes razed, their crops laid waste, they have risen surprisingly above their hardships. It will not be long before all the world upheaval are at [illegible] headed.

worse than ever since Joan went East to boarding school.

"You think nobody ever went before! Oh, Mother—I DO want to go to Bryn Mawr. I think Father's so stingy."

"Hilda!"

"Well, he is. But I don't care—I'm going to set him back plenty for this Tri Theta dance—"

What can you do with girls these days? Mrs. Sedgwick had such a cold. Too ought to go with them, and see they didn't pick out something foolish, but she felt so miserable—"Achoo!"—There—she was sneezing again. "Remember, Mother wants you to get something girlish, and not too expensive—you know what Father said about last month's bills—"

Harsh fun to shop. The black velvet in the Ville de Paris was too lovely for words, but of course Mother would have a fit.

"Why don't you like the green taffeta at Nelson's?" Anne was so easily pleased.

"Oh there are a million just like it—I want something really nice Father needn't be so tight! Let's just look in Francine's—"

"Hilda! Mason Francine! They don't have a thing less than—"

"I know—but we can look—"

There was just one gown in Francine's window. A cloud of heavenly pink . . . girlish enough to please a doting mothers . . . chic enough to sicken all one's friends . . . Hilda knew exactly what she'd look like in it . . .

So did Hogan when Hilda wanted to try it on. Those stoop shoulders, grunted—

"I'll have it modeled for you," she gushed. "You can tell so much better, seeing it on the figure—"

Of course, Anna had to take that very minute to go out to lunch. "You'll have to model the pink chiffon for me!" Hogan said belligerently to Joan, "lending a hand" in the workroom.

Francine had praised her. She felt giddy with elation. "Why I don't mind, Hogan!"

Down the three shallow steps Joan came, all glowing like the rosy gown.

No more modeling, soon. No more of this walking around like a doll, stifling her youth, had wound the clock and padded off to bed.

It was hard, but it paid! She was getting there, building a career. She'd be a success! She'd climb to the top . . . forget . . . forget . . .

Over in Sausalito the girls she used to know had forgotten her, all but Hilda Sedgwick in Hilda's world a little flame of envy burned . . . The stuck up Van [illegible]

Joan's stiff lips wouldn't form the words, "How do you do, Hilda? You didn't know I worked here, did you?" While she struggled to say them, Hilda watched fascinated, staring incredulously at first, as if she had seen a ghost. Then, with a sharp jerk at her sister's arm and a mumbled, "I don't like it after all," to Hogan, she was gone, Gone with Joan's hat hopes in her stubby hands.

"Well, of all the false alarms!" Hogan patted her back heavily, disgustedly. "Did you ever? I sured fooled that boy as soon as they set foot in the shop. Window shoppers."

• • •

All afternoon Joan tried to think Hilda would go straight home and tell her mother, and Mrs. Sedgwick would call on Aunt Evvie right away. Tuesday and there— But she never got any further in her thoughts. They stuck right there, her head ached now. There wouldn't be any future now. Aunt Evvie would do something . . . Something to spoil it . . . shame her—something . . .

Throb. Throb. Throb. She went to snatch one of the filmy gowns she saw hanging on the rack and tie it, ever so tight about her head, to stop the pain.

"Madame Francine tells me such interesting things of you. She says you are studying design."

It was Mrs. Curtis Barstow, "the nicest customer." Joan always called her that, tried to smile through the pain, because it was so nice of Mrs. Barstow to remember that she wanted to be a designer. But, of course, she didn't know that Aunt Evvie would put a stop to it—that it was all over—

"I've got such a headache!" she heard herself saying.

"Oh, I'm so sorry. Come have some hot tea with me. I was just going in search of some! Madame will let you come. Jim says, he's a clumsy, you'll let me have Miss Hastings for tea?"

Mrs. Barstow, all mink fur and perfume, seemed considerate, hurry pushed Joan into her waiting limousine.

"I believe we'll go home," she said. "It's so much more restful. And I can give you something for your poor head."

It was good to feel cool hands on her hot forehead, Mrs. Barstow was so nice. Joan had always admired her tremendously, her perfectly dressed white hair, her delicate Dresden-china charm. They had often talked together for hours in the shop, about books and wild flowers and styles. She wasn't only a customer, she was a friend

Her house was nice too. Big and airy and old fashioned, like the old place across the bay. There was even a garden, with a hedge. And a silver tea service with elaborate scrolls and engraving, like the one she used to help Hooley clean at home.

"Stay to dinner, too," Mrs. Barstow begged. "My son is away, and I so hate to be alone. I'm such a rich woman. He spoils me so. I feel truly sinful when I do dress up for a lone dinner. Curtis is the handsomest man—had dulled the aches, and the [illegible] had warmed Joan's heart a bit. Her head wanted to put down on the soft pillows. When she went home she would have to think. Here she could just listen, while Mrs. Barstow talked.

She showed Joan pictures of [illegible] of sailing, baby in a [illegible] bathing dress. "My son, Curtis at seven weeks."

They had finished dinner already! She was drinking coffee out of a small gilt and blue cup that Mrs. Barstow, still rambling on in her sweet, colorless voice, said her son had brought from France last summer, when he dined from dear opened and Curtis himself—Joan knew it was he even before his mother presented him, came in.

"I didn't expect you tonight." Mrs. Barstow half rose from her chair, and glanced at Joan.

He glanced at Joan too, and the color rose ever so quickly in his olive cheek. His light brown eyes seemed to darken, he pushed his smooth hair back with a nervous, boyish gesture.

He didn't look like Bill, not a bit but something, in the way he looked at her made Joan think of Bill. Made her a bit afraid of that first day when she stood in the window and he looked up at her from the rose garden in the rain, and her eyes blurred. She looked down at her plate.

"Miss Hastings has been keeping me company. I'm such a terribly old woman to let her for his poor child has a headache." Mrs. Barstow was murmuring tactful things, all about Joan's headache, and how the time creeps round so fast. "I'm going to send you right home, my dear, so that you'll have a good night's rest, and will feel so much better in the morning. Curtis, if you'll call the car, and tell Roberts—"

"She doesn't want me to know her son—she'd never have asked me here if she knew he was coming home!" Joan thought. Tears welled up, she just took at him—

All ready to start, Miss Hastings?"

Curtis Barstow was going to drive her himself.

"But you have a cold, dear—you said it sore throat yesterday." His mother's hands fluttered over his head. Imagine a man afraid of a cold! Mrs. Barstow's fluttering white hands irritated Joan for a moment. There was a strength about him, a quiet unyielding determination . . . no nonsense, no fighting it, and besides, it didn't matter.

At the door he waited here-headed, smiling, while she searched for her key.

And when am I going to see you again?"

Joan thought of Mrs. Barstow. Hilda. Everyone. "I always stay home and study at night," she said quickly. Too quickly.

"Poor child!" he murmured. "Well, I have to put a stop to so much work. All work and no play—you must hope you're better in that harness."

He was gone but he would come back. Joan knew that he would, and now she knew whether she was glad or sorry.

Home Complexion Peeler Beautifies Skin

It is simple to make your complexion beautiful and keep it so by the regular use of pure mercolized wax. Procure an ounce from your druggist and use as directed. It will quickly but gently peel off all the grimy, withered or blemished skin with such defects as fre'kles, pimples, blackheads and excessive oiliness. The new skin then revealed is smooth, fresh, firm and youngest looking. Mercolized wax helps rout the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use as face lotion 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 2 half pint witch hazel.

"Happiest Girl in Mass."

So many mothers nowadays talk about getting their children fruit laxatives instead of a nasty dose of salts. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years mothers have been using California Fig Syrup for surpassing anything you can possess from home or yard fruit juices by using pure, delicious, wholesome Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from fresh California figs. Because of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how billous, constipated, sick children respond to its gentle guidance; how their stomachs clean up, their tongues lose their coating and they become wonderfully playful, energetic again. A little boy in Malden, Mrs. Mary Hooley, 72 Hampshire St., Boston, says of My little daughter, Dorothy, "She is so constipated that I was badly worried. Then a friend got me to give her some California Fig Syrup. It acted on her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in Massachusetts."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton most of us the name Lithuania has a nebulous meaning. Lithuania, nestling in the middle of Europe, is one of the many countries resulting from the World War. AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

TAKE-OUT OF SUIT BID

HOLDING two or less cards of the suit bid in his partner can have no positive guarantee that the partnership holds a majority of the cards of that suit, since the initial bid may have been made on a four-card suit. Consequently, to be assured of holding a majority of the cards of what may prove to be the trump suit, parter should hold at least three cards therein.

A holding of but two cards headed by Ace, King or Queen may, however, be considered an approximate equivalent to three small cards. A four-card suit headed by three honors with no outside high honor or partner's hand might offset the advantage gained by the opponents in holding seven of the thirteen trumps, or even with better than the minimum requirements for a take-out, and especially if the bidder's hand is more than fourth in the bid suit, it would not be wise to bid, but two and even if headed by Ace, King or Queen.

Also, though the initial bidder should hold five cards of the suit and the partner hold but two the probabilities are two to one against finding the remaining cards of the suit split 3-3 between the opponents.

Thus, regardless of whether the suit initially bid is one of four or five cards, partner when holding two or less small cards of suit as possible when holding A x, K x x Q x x should

1 Take out with a Major suit holding as good as a defensive bid

2 Take it out with Minor suit but not with No Trumps

3 Take out with Major suit as good as a defensive bid

A good test as to the correct take out would be with a hand containing one or more honors to the suit bid to assist the Ace and King of other suits in the hand, in the event of two other cards of the suit bid, and it is to declare as if the partner had bid a new suit.

To leave partner in with but two small cards of his suit when holding a sound take-out, on the theory that high cards held in other suits will offset the deficiency in trumps is one of the gravest mistakes that can be made in Auction Bridge bidding.

WRITE A CHECK TODAY FOR THIS WORTHY CAUSE!

TODAY we make an announcement that should appeal to 3.11 per cent of the entire population of this great land of ours. We propose to erect the above beautiful structure by public subscription and run it as a Home for the Narrow Minded. The Allied Architects have donated the plans. All you are asked to do is donate the money. We hope to eventually have one of these homes in every block in every city of the United States. A special feature will be the non-opening windows and doors, designed especially to help the inmates learn to entertain themselves.

Once-Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

WHAT is your plan of life?

A noted man of this country divided his life into five-year periods or stepping stones.

He had an objective.

Each period dove-tailed the preceding as well as the succeeding one and all carried along in line for the top.

What is your objective for January the first in 1934?

Have you well-thought-out plans for your future, or are you merely drifting along, (taking thinks as they come, hoping for the best, that in some way you will move upward a bit?

If you had a point to meet in five, ten or twenty years you would change your tactics and perhaps work to better advantage.

You would have an incentive.

You would work earnestly to accomplish something worth-while.

But, like most of us, you have probably followed a course which would be ruinous in any business venture—you are moving without a plan.

CUT APRON STRINGS

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

WHILE your baby is still creeping about the floor and coming, you probably feel that it is much too soon to begin to think about him as an adult, and the idea of him as a husband and head of a house seems like a hazy, far-off dream that need not be reckoned with for years to come.

However, the fact remains that some day he will grow up, choose a mate and marry. Yet, so many mothers, particularly mothers of boy babies, and mothers who have found that marriage wasn't all they had hoped for, love their sons "best wisely, but too well." One cannot love a child too much, in that love is held to its proper TYPE of love, and is richly interwoven with the bright thread of unselfishness. But mother love slides easily into a selfish love, and many a mother sees her son too well, indulging only her own craving to give out and receive love in return, with no regard for the effect of this on the boy's adult life. This usually happens in cases where a woman feels that she and her husband are drifting apart, that their relationship is not the sweet thing it once was, and that perhaps a baby would provide a bond which would draw them close again. Personally, I have never seen this successful. It seems that if there has been a weakening in the marriage relationship, a baby, instead of making it strong and whole again, only serves to sever what thin threads are left. It takes a devoted understanding love between two people, a willingness to understand and sacrifice, to hold up under the necessary adjustments, the seemingly unavoidable little jealousies and the monopoly of time and attention a baby occasions in a home.

A mother who for one reason or another is left to bring up a boy, or more than one boy, without the father, runs a dangerous chance of ruining their happiness in marriage unless she gives the matter conscientious thought. The boy becomes a protector (as he grows older) and, realizing his mother's lack of amusement and attentions, naturally takes her about more than the boy in an average home showers her with attentions and gives her more conscious thought than a boy whose father does these things. When THE girl comes along, a situation arises which has wrecked many a new home. The mother has overstepped her rights, and no one realizes it quite so thoroughly as the wife.

If you desire happiness for your little boy when he is no longer a little boy, but a grown man, in his own home, love him as a mother, but let him go free. Demand and earn only his love for you as his mother, so that when he finds his mate you can both rejoice in her and share her—you as a charming, loving mother who has acquired a daughter, and he as a normal husband who feels free to accord his wife every attention of a sweet heart in your presence, without fearing to hurt you by so doing.

FLIGHTS and FLIERS

by George W. Hamblin

The Portland air meet has ended, the Radio-Aero show is now in progress, and the air meet at Auburn opens this coming Friday.

The affair at Portland was one of the best gatherings of commercial fliers seen so far this year, with every event hotly contested, and every pilot giving his best.

The Aero show, which opens tonight, lines up as the best exposition Boston has ever had. Much credit must be given to Daniel Rochford, who has had the job of putting the show on.

Charley Emerson, pilot for Skyways, Inc., took a Challenger to New Bedford, Wareham and return to Boston with a joy hop passenger. Emerson's passenger thought he would make the trip a week-end to fly over his girl's house in New Bedford.

Jack Langley took the Stearman, Whirlwind motored, to Hanover over Sunday, and had Danny Dugan's wing walking stunt. Stanley Carson made a chute jump. Langley lasting him off at 1500 feet.

Skyways sent two ships to Portland. One of them was Andrew Ivanoff's personal Stearman, powered with a Whirlwind. Ivanoff, Carson and Prof. W. G. Brown of M. I. T. were passengers. Lieut. Crocker flown accompanied by Miss Mary Moriarti and the writer, went up late Thursday evening, getting to the field at Scarboro after dark.

Ted Kenyon, president of Skyways, has returned from the "wars." Ted finished fourth in the Los Angeles race, and came in third in the Cincinnati affray from Los Angeles. He left the ship a Stearman powered with a Warner "Scarab" engine, at Cincinnati.

Despite the high wind that swept the airport for most of the week, about 50 hours' flying was run up by the company. Dick Hollnan used the planes extensively, and the sole students included Parker, Fuller, Oakes and Mann.

Skyways Stearman has been equipped with night landing lights, and Crocker flew up for a good snow with the ship at Portland during the meet.

• • •

With the Loening amphibian doing lots of flying, the Boston Airport Corp. has put up a sign over the weekend by using the ship for low hops, and throwing in a landing in the water for good measure. The plane, flown by Augie Pabst, carried 10 passengers.

Capt. R. F. Billings and Lieut. Ralph T. Wickford, both flying Whirlwind Travelairs, cleaned up at the Keene, N. H., air meet a week ago.

William A. McCurdy, who for the past two and a half years has been working as a mechanic, left the employ of the company and will go home to Youngstown, O., for a vacation.

• • •

One of the American Eagles operated by the Bay State Flying Service received a coat of paint, the colors of the company being set by Walter and Johnnie O'Toole, who are the works in the Boston Air Service down at Bennington.

• • •

Lieut. Adolph M. Backstrom, chief pilot for the summer, flew the other OX Eagle down from Portland last Wednesday, and is using the ship for student work.

• • •

The feature event of the Amesbury air meet, beginning Friday, will be an aerial sham battle between Lieut. Backstrom and Lieut. Crocker in the Ilsen American Eagles. Both boys were members of the Royal Flying Corps during the War.

• • •

Al Anderson, president of the Pilgrim Air Service, went up to Portland in the Lincoln-Page, accompanied by Chris Fine and flown by Lieut. Stanley B. Beok, chief pilot.

Capt. Ben Ben DeArce, pilot-in-chief of Old Colony Airways, down at Muller F. d. Revere, took delivery of the Waco Taper-Wing Alcadair Eaglerock last week.

• • •

Work was begun on the proposed new runways at the airport. With the two 3500-foot runways, and plenty of hangar space available, flying will assume a different aspect over on the mud flats of Jeffries Point.

THE QUESTION BOX

(Questions pertaining to commercial aviation will be answered every week in this department.)

Q—What is meant when a flyer says the "Ceiling was low?"

A—"Low ceiling" in aviation parlance means the maximum height a flyer can reach on any day. The clouds, or rather, the lowest cloud, determine the highest a plane can go and still be within constant sight of the ground.

Q—What is the minimum age limit for an airplane pilot's license in Massachusetts? A. G. B., Brighton.

A—Sixteen years is the minimum age in this State, according to Lieut. O'Brien, State inspector of aviation.

NAME BOSTON BANKER AS PRESIDENT

Philadelphia, Oct. 1 (AP)—William Franklin Augustine, vice-president of the National Shawmut Bank, Boston, was elected president of the clearing house section of the American Bankers' Association today.

The Federal Reserve System faces a grave responsibility in dealing with inflation in the stock market and real estate transactions, Congressman Louis T. McFadden, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency told the clearing house section.

The risk of producing a business slump without intending to do so, McFadden said, could have been obviated six months ago if the Federal Reserve management had been more drastic in dealing with the speculative tendency in the stock market, whose brokers loans at present are greater than the credit extended to the agricultural industry, the foreign trade and the automobile industry.

NO HATS, NO BALDHEADS; IT'S A BARBER TALKING

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP)—The college boys who have taken up the hatless fashion may have contributed toward the tonsorial advancement of the race, if H. A. Frein's theories on baldness are accepted.

Mr. Frein came from Dallas, Texas, to tell the convention of the National Hair and Barber Supply Dealers' Association that hats cramp the hair, and unless men go bareheaded and adopt tight fitting hats, the time will come when baldness will be universal.

SEARCH WINNIPEG BANKS TO UNCOVER CARNES LOOT

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 1 (INS)—Convicted that Clinton S. Carnes, former treasurer of the Southern Manitoba Home Mission Board in Atlanta, Ga., must have considerable money cached in safety deposit boxes in various Winnipeg banks, police here today began a systematic canvass in the hope that might uncover some of the million dollars Carnes is charged with having embezzled.

Broken Dyke Floods City

Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 1 (AP)—Dykes in Wesemael, 19 miles north on the Yzer River burst today as a result of a violent gale on the North Sea. The streets of Nieuport were flooded.

A Significant Lesson for Those Who Would Use the Schools for Power Trust Propaganda

The overwhelming defeat in the recent Republican primaries of Mrs. Josephine Corliss Preston, for sixteen years state superintendent of public instruction of Washington, is a significant lesson for the guidance of public school officials and teachers generally; and also those who would use the schools for propaganda.

The verdict against this well-known educator was based upon the widespread belief that she had been used to plant power trust arguments in schools of her state.

Although Mrs. Preston denied the charge, which was made in a wire to the Federal Trade Commission by Homer T. Bone, a public ownership leader of Seattle, political analysts say that the 50,000 majority against her—with every other Republican state official winning renomination—can be attributed to no other cause.

The facts in the case are these:

About a year ago Mrs. Clare Ketchum Tripp prepared a number of booklets dealing with various industrial plants, their financial set-up, methods of operation, etc., and with Mrs. Preston's co-operation, had them introduced into the vocational education classes of county schools in the state.

These, generally, were not subject to criticism, it said, but there was one dealing with the Puget Sound Power & Light Company which contained arguments on the question of private versus public ownership of utilities.

This was found by friends of the municipally-owned electric light plant in Seattle and of the Tacoma municipal plant, both highly successful and under constant attack by private interests, to be decidedly objectionable.

Investigation of the power company booklet, last April, brought an admission from Mrs. Tripp that Mrs. Preston had been paid $100, with $50 still due, for services in "editing" some of the pamphlets, although it was not disclosed which ones.

The Federal Trade Commission has promised to investigate this situation, and it should be an especially interesting chapter in the story of power trust propaganda, as vocational education in the county schools of Washington receives Federal aid under the Smith-Hughes Law of 1917.

The defeat of Mrs. Preston, after long service as state superintendent establishes in terms that all should read, including companies in the power trust as well as teachers, that even the suspicion that the schools are being used for propaganda brings drastic remedy from the people who support those schools.

The Policeman's Lot

No Happier in Gloucester Than in the Gilbert & Sullivan Opera

If you are clever at mysteries please tell us how it has come about that both the policemen and the firemen of Gloucester are unpopular in their City Hall?

The Cape Ann city employs 40 police officers and an equal number of fire-fighters. The patrolmen are paid $5 a day, or $35 a week.

When the men of both departments asked a lay or two ago for an increase of a dollar a day, the Mayor and all but one of the Aldermen jumped upon them with alacrity and enthusiasm. The "one" Alderman was absent.

The petitioners followed the usual course, bearing down hard on the fact that policemen and firemen of other cities in the same class are much better paid. They did more. They compared themselves with the men who go fishing out of Gloucester. Only a day or two before, the men of the Orion had come in with a share of $375 for only 24 hours. Many share $2000 in six months.

But Mayor Parsons, in particular, was adamant. He said:

"You are not bad off at $5 a day, whether it snows or it rains, or the wind blows or the sun shines. A lot of the police officers get a little extra, two weeks' vacation, two weeks' pay if they are sick; the firemen a day off in three, the police a day off in eight.

"You fellows don't meet the strong, able men who come up here begging for work for even a day, men with five or six children, looking for a little with which to buy shoes, clothing and something to eat.

"Can we pay you $42 a week in justice to the men on the wharves who are wet all day, the men wheeling fish, and everybody else? The men of the highway department work hard but they lose the rainy days and other days here and there. Have a heart! The condition of the city is not of the best. We're not rich, and there is not a rich man in the town.

"The increase you ask for would come out of people who work for a living, men who go around the Point, and while it does not make much difference to you it does to those where sunshine, luck and business mean everything."

While neither policeman nor fireman made any reference to the sauce which is made from apples, they did remark that while "To Let" or "For Sale" signs may be seen in all other cities and towns within a radius of 60 miles, there is none on view in Gloucester. This, they suggested, was a "sign of prosperity."

They were bowled over, 4 to 0.

And this, we say, is MOST remarkable, for while there is always an anti-police sentiment on the street and in the corners of the smaller city, the "department" is seldom without friends and champions in the City Hall.

It would be interesting to know what the wives of these public servants think of their ill success with the "politicians," MORE interesting to know how they pay the rent, feed and clothes and educate their children, and ever give a thought to life insurance and savings bank, on $35 a week.

Gas Pistols

Can the Criminal Buy Them as He Buys Machine Guns?

Not because he expects to have any use for them, but merely to be on the safe side, the Chief of Police of Quincy has placed an order for two gas riot-pistols.

Effective indoors or out, these pistols discharge a "blind-X" gas which fills the eyes with tears, partially blinds,

New York Day by Day

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and half filled the bath tub with cracked ice and plugging into it turned blue, which affrighted me so I sat about chattering like a baboon and looking foolish most the morning.

So for a bite with a gentleman who lives in a roof penthouse and Ed C. Bill, the gasteteer, there and also an exotic lady who lives in Constantinople but whose name I cannot spell or pronounce. And there was much aloof high-brow talk which eventually turned to the subject of pretzels, and conversations became general.

In the evening for a motor ride to Easthampton and had an iced drink on the Irvin Cobbs' verandah and John N. Wheeler and wife and some others there and Irvin showed us his collection of Indian pictures. Home late to bed and fell asleep reading of Marco Polo.

CRIMINALS like proverbial birds of feather, flock together in New York. There is a block on West 49th-st. that is the hangout of auto thieves. Pickpockets have their rendezvous on 14th st. The Times sq. section is a fertile pasture for confidence sharps and crooked gamblers. Shoplifting ladies seek the seclusion of suburban towns. Professional beggars have a roost on Bleecker st. and the gate-toting gorillas have the lower East Side for their beat. Circus grafters, when not on the road, are to be found along 10th ave. Cheap dope pedlars in Chatham sq.

IN proportion to numbers, it is said, pickpockets suffer the least from arrest. Their calling is the most furtive of all criminal activities. Unless they are caught in the act, it is rare they are taken in hand.

WITHOUT, it is our criminal department talking again, the "fence"—the depot for thieves' loot—thievery would be a comparatively profitless calling. A crime hunter would rather nab the proprietor of a fence than a dozen well known criminals. They usually camouflage their business with an air of respectability. To appearances they may be conducting a reputable clothing or jewelry store, a restaurant or hotel. There are some in expensive offices with titles of "Architect," "Real Estate" and such other worthy occupations gilded on frosted doors.

AT the 72nd st. subway station one morning I saw a pickpocket who had been taught in the act, a woebegone fellow down at the heel and out at elbow. He was in the grip of a stalwart plain clothes man and his sickly white pallor and obvious twitching from cocaine made him about the most abject creature one ever saw. Riding to the next station across from him one could not help but be impressed by the slimness and remarkable grace of his hands. They had the extraordinary nimbleness seen only on talented violinists and pianists.

IN the program of a show two ladies of the ensemble spell their names Murphee and Clancee. The Murphys and Clancys will not care for that.

E. H. SOTHERN and Julia Marlowe, for the first time in their years of trouping, have a permanent home. They own an apartment in an exclusive co-operative building at 290 Park ave. Mr. Sothern is reputed to have one of the most carefully-selected small libraries in town.

WHILE strolling in Central Park this evening putting finishing touches on a castle in Spain, a seedy gentleman with that easy air of prosperity New Yorkers know so well, commanded me to get off the grass. I obeyed, but if I were rich I would not be so petty about a little grass that didn't belong to me.

Gas Pistols

constricts the throat and "renders the victim powerless to resist the officer of the law."

In a gymnasium on the third floor of the Quincy station the Connecticut manufacturers of the riot-pistol staged a demonstration recently before Chief Bishop.

Two windows were open and a strong draft was perceptible, but the firing of a single pistol made it impossible to stay in the room.

The report reminds us that once upon a time all that was needed to disperse a mob was to read the Riot Act. Now, we have the scientific use of gas.

But the horrid thought occurs that inasmuch as rum-runners and hi-jackers are able to buy machine guns at will, they will quite likely be stocking up with gas pistols.

And it also occurs that if the new weapon is capable of making the bad man powerless to resist the law officer, it may also be used BY the bad man AGAINST the officer.

Our crime problem will never be solved with gas.

General Motors

World's Greatest Export Corporation!

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, has gone abroad to look over the foreign branches of the company.

He says that General Motors this year will ship overseas a total of 290,000 cars and trucks. This is more cars than the total number that exists in Italy, Sweden and Norway together.

General Motors, with its prospective foreign business of $265,000,000 in 1928, is probably the greatest export corporation in the world today.

HOW TO WRITE A DETECTIVE STORY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE detective story has become an institution. Almost every publishing house issues one or more a month. This implies that there are thousands of writers hoping to compose a successful detective story.

It may be of assistance to many of these aspiring writers to know the essentials of this kind of a tale.

There is a certain amount of hokum useful anywhere.

Actors use it. Certain storm scenes, shipwreck scenes and battle scenes are standardized for almost any movie that wants them. So there are some things necessary in any good mystery story. They are:

1—Hawkshaw was a mild, insignificant looking man. He had pale, watery blue eyes, but somehow seemed to observe every thing in his surroundings.

2—The detective looked at him with a steely glint in his eyes.

3—Hawkshaw smiled a grim smile.

4—"Ah," said Hawkshaw, "I see the man that made this pencil mark on the wall had an Uncle Dudley that was killed in the war, also an Aunt Maria from Lowell, Massachusetts; his grandfather on his mother's side had a wart on his nose and his third cousin was named Elmer and he wore a number 11 shoe."

"Marvelous," said I.

"Not at all," replied the detective. "Simply deduction."

5—"Whom do you suspect?" I asked.

"I never tell my conclusions until I have evidence usable in court," said Hawkshaw, "but I will arrest the criminal at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon."

6—Detective work is mostly infinite pains and hard work.

7—I had a feeling that there was someone in the room with me. I could see nothing nor hear nothing, but I sensed someone's presence.

8—Eleanor was a beautiful girl. The moment I saw her I knew that I had met the one woman for me. She, however, did not know this so well.

9—"That man is not guilty," said Hawkshaw. "I will stake my reputation on it, although all circumstances point to his guilt."

10—As soon as he was apprehended the criminal kindly broke down and told us all how it happened. In good detective stories the criminal usually tells the reader all he wants to know.

11—The detective smiled mysteriously and filled his pipe.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I'VE lived quite a number of years without learning much—

And most of the ideas I started with, I've had to discard—

But of one thing I'm sure and I grow more certain of that one thing every day—

IT PAYS TO LOVE.

I've never really loved yet without profiting by it.

That doesn't mean that it has always been easy to love—

Or safe—

Or comfortable—

Or successful in obvious ways—

Often, indeed, love has seemed anything but a good investment—

Sometimes it has ended for me in humiliation—

Or ingratitude—

Or financial loss—

And once, where my whole heart was bound, it ended in death—

Yet, looking back over it all, I say again—

IT PAYS TO LOVE.

Love has made my life deeper and stronger—

Love has quickened my imagination and warmed my sympathies—

Love has taught me how to laugh and cry, and dream and pray and dare—

Love has made me able to carry my chin high and my spine straight—

Love has given me real pride in place of petty, personal conceit—

BUT, OF COURSE, I'VE HAD TO PAY A PRICE FOR ALL THESE THINGS.

IT'S NONSENSE TO THINK YOU CAN KNOW THE HEIGHT AND THE DEPTH AND THE GLORY OF LOVE WITHOUT PAYING A PRICE—OFTEN A HEAVY PRICE.

If you're banking on love to provide you with merely pretty, peppy experiences, you're out of luck.

Love will provide you with boredom as well as bliss, with pleasure as well as pain, with danger as well as delight, and agony as well as ecstasy.

If you expect love to give you possession of other lives and make them serve your bidding, you are again out of luck.

Love isn't a Building and Loan Scheme—

Love is a vast current of inspiration and energy which carves its way through life—

Often the carving hurts—

BUT LOVE ALWAYS PAYS, NO MATTER HOW GREAT THE HURT.

The weary hours one spends in loving and serving little children—

The lonely hours one spends in loving a man or woman—

The humdrum hours one spends in loving a friend—

The ranking hours that come if love is despised—

The black despair when death has taken love—

They are all part of the price one pays for the great privilege of loving.

But hard as the price is, don't begrudge it. Pay it willingly, pay it gladly and gallantly—

FOR LOVE IS THE GREATEST ADVENTURE ON EARTH—

AND THOUGH ITS TRAIL BE MARKED WITH BLOOD AND TEARS, FOLLOW IT—LOVE ALWAYS PAYS.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

There is no teaching until the pupil is brought into the same state or position in which you are; a transmission takes place; he is you, and you are he; there is a teaching; and by no unfriendly chance or bad company can he ever quite lose by the benefit.—Emmerson.

A strong sense of injury often gives point to the expression of our feelings.—Pliny the Younger.

Know the true value of time; snatch, seize, and enjoy every moment of it. No idleness, no laziness, no procrastination; never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.—Chesterfield.

It is a proof of great talents to recall the mind from the senses, and to separate thought from habit.—Cicero.

The alleged power to charm down insanity, or ferocity of beasts, is a power behind the eye.—Emerson.

Know the true value of time; snatch, seize, and enjoy every moment of it. No idleness, no laziness, no procrastination; never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.—Chesterfield.
